National Officers Share Enthusiasm For FFA Program

LOU ANN GOOD

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Six of the nation's brightest and most articulate teens gave vibrant testimony to the advantages of participating in FFA recently.

The six are national FFA officers who presented a leadership workshop for Milton Hershey School students. The three-day workshop offered a glimpse into the opportunities and growth the FFA team experienced through their FFA involvement.

"It's the greatest experience of my life and something that could be yours," Travis Hagen told the 50 students who were selected to attend the pilot program.

It was the first time the national FFA officers presented the workshop, for which they developed the curriculum. This pilot program will be fine-tuned and presented to state officers across the U.S. as the national officers spend 320 days on the road and log 150,000 air miles fulfilling their year-long term.

Each national officer worked with a team member to present workshops. The topics varied from the structure of FFA's founding 68 years ago to issues confronting agriculture today.

The national FFA officers are headed by president Corey Flournoy from Chicago. As an urban student, Corey's interest in agriculture was sparked in 1988 when he decided to attend the Chicago High School for Agricultural Sciences.

"I attended the school because it was strong in math and science, not because I was interested in ag," Corey said. "But every student at the school is involved in FFA. I was motivated to participate by teachers who were excited about opportunities available through the program."

That enthusiasm was contagious. Corey's interest in career

National FFA officers gather at Milton Hershey School to teach how FFA makes a positive difference in the lives of students by developing potential for premier leadership, personal growth, and career success through agriculture education. Environmental Regs, Consumer Groups Challenge Poultry Producers

ANDY ANDREWS

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Heavy government regulations in countries such as The Netherlands have made it tougher to produce poultry products. As a result, educators and industry personnel have had to forge viable working relationships to help solve the ensuing environmental and economic issues.

In fact, it is becoming a challenge to try to control poultry foodborne and other diseases simply because industry has its hands tied by many regulations as a result of intense lobbying by powerful consumer advocacy groups.

And the controversies never cease. In one case, according to a visiting professor from Holland, a consumer organization went to a supermarket, bought 100 broilers, and claimed to newspapers that up to 35 percent of the chickens were "contaminated" with Salmonella — when in fact, only five or six had small amounts of the bacteria in them.

The Netherlands export a lot of poultry products, but have had to deal with the problems of manure, according to Dr. Ron Meijerhof, visiting professor from the Centre for Applied Poultry Research, Spelderholt, The Netherlands. Meijerhof spoke to about 35 poultry producers at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar on Monday at Kreider Farms Restaurant.

Meijerhof said The Netherlands are known for several exports, mostly flowers. Also high on the export list are poultry and hogs to Germany and beer to many countries.

Meijerhof spoke about the general research under way to deal with the environmental issues of high production of poultry, about the research on layers and broilers at the Centre, and about the techniques to manage the huge amounts of manure to contain the ammonia and phosphorous.

At the research farm, the breeder houses are constructed of all brick with special equipment for air inlet control and other measures. "We build our houses (to last) almost forever," he said. "That makes it quite costly."

A great deal of the layer research is on how to produce more efficiently with less waste, while looking into the economics of the production. Also, different types of equipment are used to aid in the study of breeder production and layer management.

"We put quite a lot of money in all those little things that we have in that house, a lot more than you do here. It's not a matter of good or bad or better or worse or whatever,

FREDERICK, Md. — "A partnership to develop, promote, and deliver conservation resource programs and to meet resource management challenges" is how Royden Powell, III, assistant secretary of agriculture for the state of Maryland, described the teamwork among many agencies represented here at a recent soil stewardship luncheon.

Powell was the guest speaker at the Catoctin and Frederick Soil Conservation district's luncheon recently, in honor of Soil Stewardship Week.

Daniel C. Poole, chairman of the Catoctin Soil Conservation District, welcomed a group of SACRAMENTO (Schuylkill Co.) — Keith Masser is a family farmer and seventh-generation potato producer in the Schuylkill County town of Sacramento.

He wears a ball cap and sometimes a blond beard stubble.

His striped work shirt has his name tag sewn over the left breast, and he wears work pants and work shoes.

Masser plows, plants and he plans. His hands have calluses.

As president of Sterman Masser Potatoes Inc., he also employs, full-time, 35 people at his potato-packing plant that he built on the home farm, expanding his father's original 100-acre potato farm.

Sacramento developed, as did many small communities in the rolling ridge and valley area, primarily as a coal town. But miners needed food and a number of farmers supplied miners' tables with milk, meat and vegetables.

The name of the town means little outside of the area, but its location is just west of Hegins, a place reeling in good fortune, ever since the town's historic live pigeon shoot was targeted by an extremist animal rights group as a place to find victory in defeating an "animal abuse."

Locals there chuckle at how the annual shoot, held to raise funds to operate the town park, was on its way out because of a lack of attendance, until the event became publicized and deemed evil by the anti-animal use group.

TIPS TO IMPROVE EGGSHELL QUALITY...

Dr Milton Scott
Nutritional Consultant

"Let's get specific"

Check specific gravity of eggs on a regular basis to monitor shell quality. The percent "floaters" and "eggs in transition" in a room temperature solution of 1.08 sp. gr. is a good bench mark.

A 10 gal. bucket, a hydrometer, and an individual egg scale is all the equipment you need. Used with breeder guidelines, this test can help you fine-tune the level of oyster shell needed at each stage in the laying cycle.

For details on sp. gr. tests and the use of oyster shells, contact The Fox Co., PO Box 708, Newfield, NJ 08344. FAX 609/697-1692, Phone 800/257-7022

Delmarva Broiler

EDISON, NJ.
MAY 10, 1995

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was good. Seller offerings remained in good balance to well cleared, particularly on the smaller sizes. Live supplies varied, but were moderate overall; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Slaughter schedules were very heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 51 to 62 cents. Trade sentiment was steady, instances firm.
In the parts complex, all items continued to clear satisfactorily Breast items and wings were in closest balance. Leg quarters were adequate and generally well balanced.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
MAY 10, 1995

Cash bids for wheat were mixed, mostly lower due to profit taking on the board and weather uncertainties. Corn bids were higher on continued planting delays and more wet weather forecast for Corn Belt areas. Support was noted in bean pits today in anticipation of tomorrows USDA's Supply/Demand report and the substantial export purchase of beans from Taiwan and meal to South Korea. Wheat mostly unchanged to 2 cents lower except Kansas City 5 cents higher. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 to 3 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents higher.

Wheat bids turned mostly lower, despite continued setbacks in spring wheat planting and a slight improvement in export demand. Pressured stemmed from light fund selling on the board and cautious trading ahead of USDA's Crop Production report due out Thursday morning. Concerns are growing over too much moisture in soft red winter wheat areas causing disease.

Slight gains were made in corn pits due to ongoing delays in planting and continued wet weather forecast for Midwest regions. Light fund buying noted, also underpinned bids.

Bean bids climbed higher in reaction to good export demand from Taiwan and weather concerns. Traders expect USDA will show a cut the 94/95 carryout estimate in tomorrows Supply/Demand report.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MAY 15 - 21, 1995

ARMED FORCES DAY, MAY 20

BE PREPARED FOR PEACE

Forewarned, forearmed; to be prepared is half the victory, or so says the old Spanish proverb. George Washington also believed that peace could be insured by being prepared for war. It hasn't always worked, but as a nation, we remain committed to the idea. Even our Boy Scouts chant the motto. Ambrose Bierce (1842-1914?), on the more pessimistic side, defined "peace" this way: "In international affairs, a period of cheating between two periods of fighting." Napoleon Bonaparte (1769-1821) saw it differently: "What a beautiful fix we are in now; peace has been declared."

The better part of valor is discretion.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ A few leaves of green wormwood will ward off ants, as will camphor.

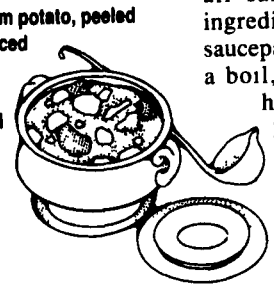
LEEK SOUP FOR TWO

- 1 leek (use everything except the dark green outer leaves)
- 2 cups water
- 1 chicken bouillon cube
- 1 medium potato, peeled and diced
- 1 small onion, peeled and diced



Cut leek into 1-inch sections and cut each section lengthwise so that you can wash away all sand. Combine all ingredients in a medium saucepan, cover, bring to a boil, uncover, reduce heat, and simmer for 20 minutes, until vegetables are soft. Puree in blender until creamy.

Makes 2 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Be it weal or be it woe, beans must blow ere May doth go.

Dandelions and daisies close before rain.

Clovers contract at the end of a storm.

Wet May, dry July.

Special Offer

Handy chart full of interesting weather proverbs. Send $3 to Weather Chart, Dept UF, The Old Farmer's Almanac, Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444.

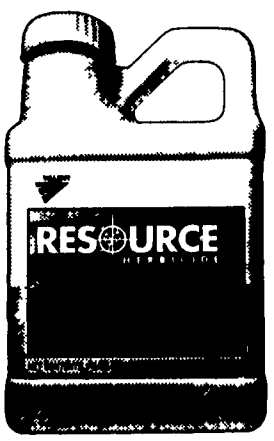
The complex formula for killing weeds.



Add

Subtract

It's that simple. Add RESOURCE® post-emergent herbicide to your tankmix, and velvetleaf, lambsquarter and other hard to kill broadleaf weeds won't be around much. It works in corn and soybeans, without rotation restrictions. So these weeds don't stand a chance.

OPINION

Property Rights And Personal Rights Interwoven

Many people in this country think that it is not wrong to take private property without paying just compensation. They obviously haven't read the US Constitution. The Fifth Amendment says that private property shall not be "taken for public use, without just compensation." All across the crountry private property rights are being trampled by government.

In cases where the government needs all of your property for a particular project that benefits the public, they are pretty good about coming forth with the money, though, there are sometimes problems over what constitutes just compensation. Mark Emery, director of communications for the New York Farm Bureau, says the problem comes when only part of your property is taken—those cases where the government diminishes all, or part of the value of your property in carrying out some aspect of the law.

It seems to us that if you own the property and a government body takes all or part of it, or the value of your property drops because of what the government is doing, they owe you. Endangered species and wetlands acts should be treated just the same as water treatment plants and roads.

For farmers property rights are sacred. No matter what public good the government needs to take property for, they must provide just compensation. Property rights and personal rights are so interwoven that we see no difference. Our country's founding fathers knew this. Let's hope today's government leaders know it also.

To Know Clean and Green Tax Savings

Tax reassessment notices have been sent to farmers this week. The notice you received this week gives you the new market value for your farm. It does not include the Clean and Green value. These will be mailed later.

Based on average figures, market value of farmland will be around $4,000 per acre. The maximum value for Clean and Green farmland is $1,220 per acre.

In Lancaster County, this means reducing the assessed value of your farm by approximately $3,000 per acre. Your taxes are determined by multiplying your assessed value times the millage rate.

For example, if your new tax millage rate is 16 mills and Clean and Green lowers your assessment $3,000 per acre, then your tax savings is $48 per acre or $4,800 on a 100-acre farm. This tax savings will be achieved regardless of the value assigned to buildings and your home.

To Sign Up For Clean And Green

Because of computer problems in the county assessment office, there has been a delay in mailing out the Act 319 or Clean and Green values to property owners of 10 acres or more.

If you are waiting for these values before you decide to sign up for Clean and Green, you may want to rethink your decision.

June 1, 1995 is the filing deadline for 1996 tax year. If your application is received after June 1, your tax savings will be for the 1997 tax year and you will pay taxes at the higher assessment value in 1996.

One important thing to remember is Act 319 is an assessment law that determines how much real estate taxes you must pay. It allows the county to establish a different value for your farm by assessing your land based on its income producing ability.

You do not need to know your Clean and Green values for your farm before you sign up. There will be reduction in appraised value for farmland.

The question is, "Can I accept the split-off provisions and rollback tax in return for the lower tax assessment?" If yes, then sign up now, well ahead of the June 1 deadline.

Remember, property owners with less than 10 acres will have to secure an Act 319 application themselves. They will not automatically be receiving one. Applications are available at meetings and the extension office.

If you have any questions, attend one of the Clean and Green meetings scheduled in the county or call the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension office at (717) 394-6851.

To Control Birds In Corn Fields

Each spring after corn is planted, several growers experience problems with birds eating the corn seed or birds pulling up corn plants as they emerge to eat the corn seed.

Many birds may cause the problem. However, crows, starlings, and wild geese are most often the biggest offenders. They may attack corn starting the day it is planted and will continue to find corn rows a good place to eat until the sprouts are over 3 inches tall.

The total amount of damage is very minimal. However, a field which has attracted birds may suffer almost complete annihilation.

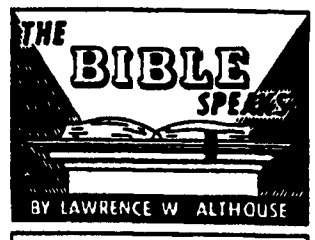
There are no registered chemicals which may be applied to seeds to prevent this. Using any product which is not labeled for bird control to control birds is illegal under federal pesticide laws.

According to Dr. Greg Roth, Penn State agronomist, planting the seed slightly deeper and ensuring good seed furrow closure may help limit the problem. Crows in particular seem to be able to locate fields where corn sprouts are easy to pull up.

Roth suggests that scattering water soaked grain near problem areas to serve as an alternative feed source may help to limit the problem.

He also suggests that the use of black plastic flags made of three mil plastic measuring two feet by three feet attached to a four foot lath have on some occasions been successful in discouraging geese feeding. The flags should be distributed about one flag per acre where geese have been a problem and about one flag per five acres where geese have not been a problem.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "The quality of a person's life is in direct proportion to their commitment to excellence."



THE ACID TEST

THE ACID TEST
May 14, 1995

Background Scripture:
II Corinthians 5
Devotional Reading:
I John 4:7-21

Recently I saw on television an evangelist who assured his followers that a particular project of the group had brought "great joy to God's heart." I remember thinking that he was a lot more certain about God's "joy" than I would be on that particular project.

The victory that the preacher was celebrating was over an advantage that his group had gained over another. The victory obviously widened the breach between the two groups and greatly increased their hostility. Without getting into the controversy itself, let me say simply that the ground of contention was the subject of prayer in the public schools.

Although I personally identified with neither of the two groups, I found it difficult to think that this controversy, however resolved, brought joy to God. The end result of the controversy is that the two groups are even more widely polarized and each judges the other quite harshly. Both were equally quite certain that they were fighting this battle for God.

DOOM & GLOOM MORE FUN

Just because a project or movement is labeled "Christian," doesn't mean that it necessarily is of God. But there is an acid test we can often apply. Paul told the church at Corinth, "All this is from God who through Christ reconciled us to himself and gave us the ministry of reconciliation" (5:8). The first part, of course, we know: God was in Christ reconciling himself to us. But that's not the end of the matter. For not only did Jesus have this ministry of reconciliation, but we too. In fact, with Christ no longer physically present with us, God's ministry of reconciliation in the world today is pretty much our responsibility.

Like Jonah, many of us are not happy with a ministry of reconciliation. We would rather emphasize the differences that divide us. Jonah didn't want the people of Nineveh to hear his prophecies and repent; he wanted to condemn them. Condemnation does seem more enjoyable. Maybe that's why so much of our time is spent elevating the things that alienate us from others. Doom and gloom (for the other guy) is more fun than proclaiming love and forgiveness.

OUR BEST SUBJECT

But Paul says, "In Christ God was reconciling the world (notice, the "world," not just the "good guys") to himself, not counting their trespasses against them . . ." (5:19). But doesn't God realize that counting and proclaiming the trespasses of others is what we enjoy and do the best.

This is the all-too-human point of view that often distorts the true nature of the gospel, the good-guys vs. the bad guys (or the righteous and the unrighteous, the saved and the unsaved). Human beings have a genius for dividing what God created to be undivided. But Paul calls us to something else: "From now on, therefore, we read no one from a human point of view . . ." (5:16).

Let's get this straight: God doesn't entrust to us the task of defending Him or guarding the portals of Heaven to keep the riff-raff out. He doesn't charge us with the duty of being a spiritual police force; still less a righteous thought-control constabulary. What he charges us with is the message of reconciliation, bringing people together, not dividing them apart.

So, although we might prefer to be warriors of God's praetorian guard, what He really wants us to be is "ambassadors for Christ, God making his appeal through us."

The acid test, then, for discerning if something is Christian or not: does it reconcile or does it alienate?

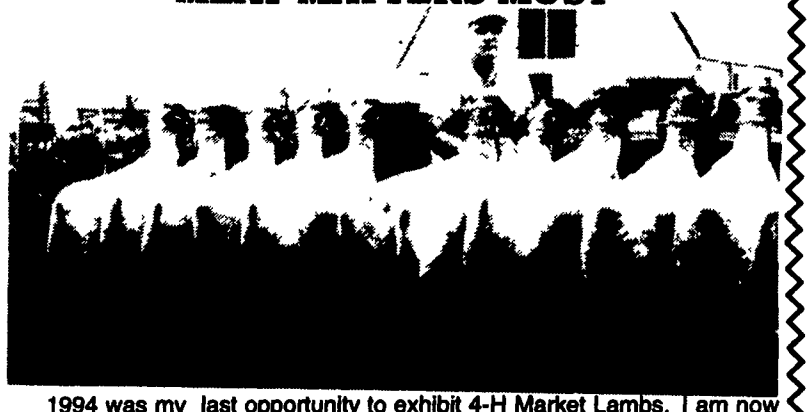
MEAT MATTERS MOST



1994 was my last opportunity to exhibit 4-H Market Lambs. I am now a Pre-Vet Major at the University of Kentucky. I may be "too old" for the showring but I haven't lost my enthusiasm for the club lamb business. I still have the same powerful ewe base that has produced the winningest market lambs in the Mid-Atlantic area. And, I intend to keep on producing winners for others.

In 1993 I purchased the National Champion Wether Sire at the Midwest Stud Ram Sale in Sedalia, Missouri. He has worked even better than I expected on my flock. I call him "LIMO". You will call his lambs L-O-N-G, SMOOTH, and TIGHT. These pretty profiling lambs with high tail sets will not disappoint!

Consider the record of DINSMORE bred market lambs in the last 11 years. Why not select your show prospects from the flock with a proven track record?

There's something extra in a starter fertilizer program.

Starter fertilizers unlock benefits for corn farmers. They stimulate seedling growth, hasten crop maturity, improve crop tolerance to some insects, increase crop competition with weeds and frequently increase yields, particularly in production fields featuring conservation tillage and irrigation. Starter fertilizers make crop production more environmentally sound because they improve fertilizer uptake, efficiency.

The agronomic benefits of starter fertilizers increase crop productivity and profits from corn production.

Family Farm Business Helps Post-Coal Economy

Now, the several-day shooting event not only receives support from pro-animal use people, and a new generation of sport shooters eager to engage in the now uncommon sport, but spectators have turned out in tremendous numbers just to see what kind of antics the "animal rights nuts" put on, and who gets arrested.

But, about 11 miles west of Hegins on Rt. 25 — a road that runs about 60 miles between I81 and the Susquehanna River — there is a fork in the road. The right road heads toward the village of Fearnot.

A red brick church with a high white steeple stands abruptly in the middle of the "Y." Off to the right is Sterman Masser Potatoes Inc.

All told, Masser's potato operation supports at least 20 local families, something that Keith said gives him constant concern.

He said his concern is that he feels it is his responsibility, to himself and his employees, to ensure that the farm remains a profitable venture.

Profit margins determine how many people can share in the success of a business. Should Masser not remain aggressive and concerned, margins could slip, and he'd have to face the prospect of telling people the business can no longer afford to offer them the opportunity to work for a roof, clothes and food.

Perhaps if Masser hadn't been raised in the area, and his family hadn't been growing its own roots for so long, and perhaps if it were not that the region is so economically depressed, then maybe Masser wouldn't feel so compelled to bear responsibility to provide opportunity for others.

But as it is, there are many small towns in nearby valleys and hills where house trailers, or homes in need of maintenance sit among rust, rotten wood and rubble of what appear to have been formerly prosperous mining villages.

Junk cars, broken household items littering some roadsides and yards, falling roofs, and acid-tainted streams flowing down sterile beds are evidence of the former coal mining heydays.

But in the afterlife of the coal-mining frenzy, the town of Sacramento seems to have survived.

In addition to a hodgepodge of local service jobs, and home businesses, some people commute to jobs, such as the Fort Indiantown Gap military installation, more than an hour's drive south.

Those jobs are tenuous. The profit in most service jobs depends on local people having adequate amounts of free-spending money.

Of course, in order to have free-spending money, a job has to pay well. Good-paying local jobs depend on businesses that are based in agriculture, processing, mining, manufacturing or the intellectual production of something, and all of these endeavors have to make something that can be sold outside of the community.

That is the economic foundation of any community: produce a unique, desirable commodity that other people, somewhere else need or want, and then conduct trade. The more money that comes into a community through the selling of a locally made product, the more prosperous it can be.

Service businesses can help support those businesses, but without them, service businesses can only sustain until local discretionary monies run out, or most people leave.

The military base, which had been seen as a stable job provider, has been under consideration for closing.

Only a stable business, based on selling a locally available commodity, can offer stable jobs.

So, instead of mining coal, some people work for Masser, helping to mine the soil for potatoes, which are then cleaned, graded, bagged, and shipped to supermarket chains.

While the business has grown to provide for 20 families supplying potatoes for market, Masser said he has been keeping his growth realistic. "I don't intend to become the biggest, but I do want to remain viable."

Keith was born in the next valley to the north, the Leck Kill area, which is within the political boundaries of Northumberland County, where his great-grandfather, Charles Masser, based his potato business.

Keith's father, Sterman Masser, moved to the Sacramento farm in 1959 and rented it from an uncle who farmed primarily in the Leck Kill area. The farm was purchased by the uncle during the early 1950s as a satellite farm.

In 1967, Sterman purchased the farm and continued to grow potatoes.

In 1980, Keith took over.

From the left, the four loading docks and the business office of Sterman Masser Potatoes Inc. front a complex of buildings for storing, grading and bagging potatoes for shipment to supermarket chains.

There are now four loading docks and a large paved and gravel parking area that some of the congregation of the neighboring church use when its own lot is overflowing.

Immediately behind the loading docks and the business office front is a complex of buildings. There are bays for receiving, large refrigerated bays for storing potatoes, and skid loader operators scurrying around moving 4-foot by 4-foot bins of potatoes to various locations, including a grading and computerized bagging operation where most employees are concentrated.

Also within the complex, there's a modern lunch room, modern restrooms (designed by regulations to accommodate a wheelchair, even though the need of having to get someone with a wheelchair up the stairs to the restroom is extremely remote), and a modern locker room.

The front of the business office area looks like a business. It has a cut-stone facade and interior, spacious carpeted front office, a long counter, and built-in glass showcases displaying the company's potato sacks and bags.

Behind the complex are a series of projects in progress. Two weeks ago, a number of grain elevators were being erected, a large refrigerated potato storage facility (with Masser designing part of the cooling system) was being finished, and underway were another building for equipment storage, and a machine shop.

In total, the business farms 2,500 acres, 400 of which are in potatoes and the others primarily in small grains.

The arrow in this aerial photograph of Sterman Masser Potatoes Inc. shows the location of the main office, wharehouse and production facilities. A grass airplane stip stretches from the facilities area down through cropped fields surrounding the area, a portion of the 2,500-acre farm property of the business.

The farming operation is not contiguous, but consists of the home farm and surrounding properties, and a series of properties stretching west, from Hegins down through the Lykens Valley to the Susquehanna River.

Applied Business

The success of Sterman Masser Potatoes Inc. is apparently because of the strong business attitude and strategies that Keith applied to the family potato business. In order to be successful, he took over the middleman jobs of processing and packaging.

The traditional relationship between farm and processor and packager has been such that farm operators take most of the risk on margin, while processor and packager build in margins in the wholesale and retail prices.

Having control of operations up to wholesale level, and supplementing on-farm production with purchased potatoes, Sterman Masser Inc. can fulfill orders and keep the margin and its reinvestment under control and in the long-range interest of the business.

Typically, processors and packagers of commodities, while supportive of independent processors as a whole, are not concerned with the woes of individual producers.

Common modern business practice is such that processors of raw products depend on competition between producers to keep down operating costs and to ensure adequate supplies.

Processors usually get their margins, regardless of strains on producers.

But with the roles of processor and packager under one roof with producer, indifference to producer problems is eliminated. As long as Masser can make the whole program work, there is hope for the local economy to continue to export goods and bring in cash.

According to Keith, he learned his work ethic from his parents and through growing up on the farm. He said he got his business acumen and training in goal-setting and planning while at Proctor & Gamble as a project engineer.

Masser said he never had any intention of returning to farming when he left for college to pursue an agricultural engineering degree at Pennsylvania State University.

He said he selected the agricultural curriculum because he felt most confident that he had a chance of succeeding in that area. Once his studies began, his interests turned toward the study of fluid dynamics.

After graduating, he went to work for Proctor & Gamble in 1972. That was also the year of Hurricane Agnes and the Flood of '72, and Masser had his first encounter with the Susquehanna River while working at Mehoopany, in Wyoming County, where Proctor & Gamble used Susquehanna River water in part of its operations.

In 1976, he returned to the home farm and worked with his father, and a brother, who died in an accident in 1980. That is when Keith took over the farm, and Sterman invested in a coal business.

In 1990, Masser took advantage of a low-interest loan program made available through the state's economic development program and purchased grading and bagging equipment. He has continued to expand. He said his goal is to double the size of the business every 10 years.

Of course that growth has its limits, but currently the business ships 18,000 tons of potatoes to supermarkets per year.

Masser is certified to apply pesticides, as are two other employees; and he has a fumigation license also. He and 10 other employees currently possess commercial driver licenses.

On the wall behind his office is a sign that states, "Stuffing is for turkeys. Eat potatoes."

On the desk is a monitor to track commodity market prices and a computer.

In 1984, Masser decided the business needed a better irrigation system for the potato fields and he wanted to build center-pivot irrigation systems. (He owns six and uses two per year.)

Seeking to comply with the law, he sought out information through the local USDA Soil Conservation Service. He was directed to the Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC).

Created in 1970, the SRBC is a federal/multi-state agency charged with authority to oversee the management of the flows of the Susquehanna River, which means the entire river drainage basin.

The agency is considered necessary because chaotic use of the water within the river basin is seen as only leading to a great deal of unnecessary costs, fighting and suffering.

The amount of water within the basin is limited and the growth of the human population can be expected to continue until those limits are reached. Some fair and orderly management is needed to maintain a reasonable standard of living within the basin.

Since Masser's operation is within the basin, he contacted the then still-developing agency, told them what he'd like to do, and asked whether he needed a permit.

According to Masser, a representative from the SRBC came to the farm and Masser explained

Holstein Association™

NEWS

Alternative ID At Early Bird Breakfast

BRATTLEBORO, Vt.— Alternative ID systems at the Holstein Association will be the focus of the Early Bird Breakfast at the National Convention this year in Pittsburgh.

The program is to follow the meal scheduled for Tuesday, June 27 at 7 a.m. and will feature Holstein producers from around the country who are successfully using alternative identification methods in their herd.

A panel of producers is to discuss alternative ID methods such as Tag ID, Tags 'N Tattoos (TNT) or freeze brands, and Radio Frequency Identification (RFID). Each will have an opportunity to share how the systems have worked in their herds.

Dr. Sid Spahr, of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, is the original user of the RFID option for registration, and will talk about the success of trials conducted at the university over the past year.

Duane Green, of Green Meadow Farms in Elsie, Michigan, has used tattoos in his herd for a number of years, and recently added the Holstein ID Tags as part of his management system. Green's farm is also the test site for the development of the electronic application prepared by the CowSearch program.

Jon Mast, of Mastead Farms in Millersburg, Ohio, is also a user of TNT. While he has not been on the TNT program a very long time, he has many years of valuable experience in using tattoos as a permanent and legible identification technique.

Charles Iager of Maple Lawn Farms, Fulton, Maryland, has been a key Tag ID user since May of 1994. Maple Lawn Farms with 175 Registered Holstein cows exemplifies how the newer Alternative ID systems may work well for the moderate sized registered operations.

Glenn Fischer, vice president of Allflex is to share recent and future improvements in cattle identification ear tags as well as a status report on the technical status of RFID (electronic) ear tags.

Holstein Calf To Support National Jr. Convention

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A yearling heifer is being offered as the prize in a contest being held to support the 1995 National Junior Holstein Convention.

According to a news release, the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association and the 1995 National Junior Convention Planning Committee are sponsoring a calf raffle to raise funds for the convention.

To participate, contact the Pennsylvania Holstein Association at (814) 234-0364.

The calf being offered is Berkline Benchmark Prim, born Dec. 4, 1993 our of TKT Leadman Pecan-ET, a Very Good-85 3-year-old with a 352-day lactation record of 25,154 pounds of milk, 1,106 pounds of butterfat, and 868 pounds of protein.

The sire is Singingbrook Benchmark-ET.

The heifer's grandam and three preceeding dams were all classified Excellent-90 percent, Gold Medal Dams, and Dams of Merit.

The grandam is Hillmont Enhancer Peach with a 365-day lactation record as a 5-year-old of 28,640 pounds of milk, 1,244 pounds butterfat, and 990 pounds protein.

The third and fourth dams also carried the Hillmont prefix and made more than 28,000 pounds of milk and more than 1,000 pounds butterfat in 365 day lactations.

National Holstein Sale Features Breed's Elite

The sales take place in conjunction with the National Holstein Convention set for June 25-28 in Pittsburgh.

"If people only want to go to one sale this year, this is it," said Bill Nichol, executive director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, this year's convention host. "We'll be featuring the best of the breed that have been selected from top herds nationwide."

The live cattle auction will take place at 6:30 p.m Tuesday, June 27, at the Lawrence Convention Center, headquarters for the National Convention. The auction will be managed by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association in State College, and the Cattle Exchange, out of Delhi, N.Y.

The silent sale will take place from 7-10 p.m. Monday, June 26, from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m., Tuesday, June 27, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesday, June 28.

Holstein Offers One Side ID

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The national Holstein Association has announced that one-side-only identification is now available to producers registering their animals.

According to a news release, Holstein producers now have the option of sketching or picturing either the left or the right side of their animals when identifying them with the Holstein Association.

The association's Board of Directors made the change in identification rules official at a recent meeting. Many producers and classifiers have suggested that the "either side" option would be easier and allow more flexibility when officially identifying animals with the association.

By using the one-side sketch/photo option, Holstein producers can submit a sketch or clear photo of either side of the animal.

A metal USDA uniform series ear tag number is also required with the one-side sketch. Approximately 35 percent of the identification applications received by the association now contain a one-side sketch or photo.

Lynn Tuttle, manager of processing services, said the change will benefit producers who can now choose the side of the animal they wish to photograph or sketch.

Identification applications are being modified to reflect the policy change.

WARNING!

An odorless, colorless, invisible--and costly-- forage thief!

You can't see it--and you can't stop it. Storage losses in forage can steal your valuable crop--how much is lost depends upon how you store your feed:

- Tower Silos have Up to 8% loss
- Bunkers have Up to 45% loss*

If the average difference in feed lost between tower silos and bunkers is 30%, then storage of 1000 tons will mean 300 tons MORE lost in a bunker. If silage is valued at $30 per ton, the additional losses from bunker storage would be $9000 a year.

For information on losses for all types of crop storage methods, contact the Crop Storage Institute for your free copy of " Methods of Crop Storage" and "Know the Facts."

Questions Abound As Lancaster Clean And Green Sign-Up Begins

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Lack of actual farmer involvement in the decision-making process regarding county Clean and Green figures may have led to values that are three times higher than many of the surrounding counties.

What's more, it's possible that farmers who want to appeal their taxes, even if they sign up for Clean and Green, may use that evidence as grounds for appeal, according to information gathered at the third of four Clean and Green educational meetings held this week.

At a Clean and Green educational seminar at the Manheim Central High School Auditorium Wednesday evening, sponsored by the Lancaster County Farm Bureau, 250 farmers were present to hear Dr. Robert Barr, president of the Fair Tax Institute, provide information vital to those signing up to save taxes under Clean and Green.

While president of 21st Century Appraisals, Barr was involved in the decision-making process that provided the formulas for revaluating agriculture use land values under Act 319, or Clean and Green, for 15 counties in the state.

Barr indicated that the values from Clean and Green, passed into law in 1974, were measured in the hundreds. York County's Clean and Green average value is $350 per acre per year; Chester County's average is 340, Adams is 320, and Berks is $610.

Barr was not involved in the final decision-making process regarding Lancaster County. Asked why the value in Lancaster, for the ag use portion of the Soil Productivity Group I, this year set at $1,220 per acre per year, was twice or three times other than other counties, he said the decision was made "internally" and he "can't defend or explain" the decision.

Regardless, farmers will save substantially on taxes in 1996 by signing up for Clean and Green. In many cases, taxes for Lancaster County farmers have tripled under fair market value. The cost savings when farmers sign up under the "ag use" segment of Clean and Green can add up to major and substantial savings.

If farmers don't sign up for Clean and Green by the deadline of June 1, next year they could be hit "like a two-by-four between the eyes" by their tax bill.

"The taxes could literally put you out of business," Barr told farmers at the meeting. About 50,000 tax notices were mailed to landowners in the county on Tuesday. When the remaining 117,000 notices are mailed, in all, about 9,000 may qualify for Clean and Green.

"It's time you manage your real estate taxes," he said.

By law, once the appraisals are finished and the notices are sent, it is up to the landowner to provide evidence if he thinks the taxes are unfair or there is a problem with the assessment. "The burden of proof is on you," he said. That proof, at the formal review, must be viable and include three or four comparable sales of similar property, comparisons of equity, market analysis reports — in other words, "a second opinion" about the property's value.

"If you don't do any of that, you are probably wasting your time," said Barr.

The court-ordered ruling came more than 30 years after the last county reassessment. Because of that long interim, it is becoming difficult for many farmers to face the new taxes.

In several counties in the state, reassessments must occur on a relatively close periodic basis, such as every four to five years. Lancaster County has none of those mandates.

The appraisal value is the typical value assuming the property is in perfect condition. There could be limiting factors that affect saleability, such as landlocked areas, wetlands, excessive soil stoniness, zoning restrictions, or others that may help farmers win an appeal.

Farmers should keep in mind that the ag use value of the land is based on the income that could be made off the property based on what a prudent investor will invest and be able to pay off as a result from proceeds from that land, according to Barr.

That "clear income stream" provides a yardstick for what the property is worth. Items such as old bank barns, which are used as nothing but storage areas, are often "not worth beans on the marketplace," said Barr.

To be eligible for Clean and Green, farmers must have 10 or more contiguous acres. If 10 acres or under, the land must be "capable" of producing more than $2,000 gross income per acre per year. This is tillable land, not woodland. (The land doesn't have to be continuously plowed, however. It just has the potential to be.)

For farmers with some type of commercial enterprise not related to farming on the property, Barr instructed farmers simply to fill out the forms and the assessment office will take a look at it later.

It's important that the "ag use" box segment be checked before dropping it off at the dropoff meetings (see Farm Calendar, page A10). At the dropoff meetings, the Clean and Green signup filing fee is $40.

For more information, contact Barr at the Fair Tax Institute by calling (800) REAL TAX.

Several dropoff meetings were held this week. At a meeting at the Eugene Martin farm in New Holland, about 50 families filed Clean and Green forms. At a meeting in Martindale, turnout was in the hundreds, with many lined up outside the door all day. Many farmers were also present at a dropoff meeting on north Railroad Avenue in New Holland. In all, the dropoff meetings sponsored by the Earl Township Preservation Trust totalled more than 400, according to a spokesperson.

More dropoff meetings are scheduled next week. See the farm calendar starting on page A10 for times and locations.

WITH NEW EXCEED, THE BROADLEAVES UP HERE DON'T HAVE A CHANCE.

FOR THE NEXT 30 DAYS, NEITHER DO THE WEEDS DOWN HERE.

There's a new postemergence herbicide for corn just out from Ciba Crop Protection that knocks down your toughest broadleaves, then keeps them down with longer residual control. It's called Exceed.

Exceed knocks down 27 different broadleaves, including velvetleaf, ragweed, pigweed, cocklebur and lambsquarters. And it delivers up to four weeks of residual control.

But the benefits don't stop there. Exceed also gives you a wide application window and excellent crop safety. There's still time to include new Exceed in your crop plans for this year. See your dealer for details on this powerful new tool. Exceed. It gets more weeds. It gives you more time to get them.

Nominations Sought For Commodity Boards

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius has announced that nominations are being accepted for positions on several of the state's commodity marketing and research boards.

Brosius said the general public and leading farm organizations have until May 19 to submit nominations for the following boards: Apple Marketing, Peach and Nectarine Research, Potato Research, Sheep and Lamb Marketing, and Vegetable Marketing and Research.

Producers affected by the programs are eligible for nomination.

The Agriculture Department's Bureau of Market Development tallies nomination ballots in order to make the final selections.

"We want our producers to get involved with these programs," Brosius said. "These research and marketing efforts are designed to increase farm profitability."

Members would be responsible for all matters pertaining to the programs, such as hiring personnel, administering the program budgets and issuing annual reports.

To make a nomination, submit the person's name, address, county, and area of interest to Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Market Development, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

The Netherlands export a lot of poultry products, but have had to deal with the problems of manure, according to Dr. Ron Meijerhof, visiting professor from the Centre for Applied Poultry Research, Speiderholt, The Netherlands, on left. Meijerhof spoke to about 35 poultry producers at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar on Monday at Kreider Farms Restaurant.

Environmental Regs, Consumer Groups Challenge

it's just different."

To conduct research, the costs are split 50-50, according to Meijerhof, between the government and farm organizations. Both have to pay for studies on poultry. "In practice, it means that (this situation) is often used as a sort of battlefield between the government and industry. A lot of times we are used as a tryout," he said.

Areas under research include:

• Environmental issues. "Ammonia production is probably the biggest problem we have in our environment," because of high levels of nitrogen in the manure. Meijerhof indicated that agricultural production is blamed excessively for ammonia production, which he said is caused "mainly by heavy industry and mainly by cars, and not so much by agriculture. But the heavy industry and cars are not as easy to control as the agriculture industry can be controlled." So research is being conducted to limit the amount of phosphorous and ammonia produced.

• Animal welfare. There is a lot of pressure from consumer organizations, government, and industry to study different types of layer and broiler systems. Aviary systems are under study, and ways to handle cockerel killing are progressing that "suits industry and is acceptible to public opinion," said Meijerhof.

• Product quality and safety. Producers and consumers are both part of the issue. But campylobacter, a disease which can often be confused with Salmonella, is the real culprit and is difficult to control because of far-ranging and excessive regulations. In fact, there is so much confusion, according to the professor, that campylobacter is simply referred to as Salmonella.

• Efficiency. To produce a better bird and improve the feed quality are also being examined at the Centre.

The environmental issues often take center stage in research at the Centre. Government mandates dictate that ammonia levels have to be reduced. So research is looking at ways to dry up the manure, reducing the moisture and putting the manure in marketable form. But it is costly. A directive is on to establish ammonia levels in the environment at 70 percent of what they were nearly 10 years ago.

The "pressure from politics" that has created these restrictions has industry and educators worried. Meijerhof said that many of the voters who decide on the regulations are from the bigger cities. Some voters think that farmers, in general; "are rough on animals, are wealthy, they contaminate the environment, and say we don't need them. (The voters) say we can get what we need from the supermarket anyway."

As a result, industry has had to work closely with the consumer groups to join them in the early stages and try to introduce "common sense" to work out the problems.

"A lot of the regulations are already in place by the industry itself before the government comes in. It works out. I wouldn't say quite well, but it works out."

what he wanted to do.

But the representative didn't tell him if a permit was necesssary, and Masser wasn't advised. "I never got a response from (SRBC) until July 16, 1991," Masser said.

Late Correspondence

In fact, Masser received a letter dated July 16, 1991, from Robert Bielo, former executive director of the SRBC.

In the letter, regarding the use of water for irrigation, Bielo stated that the commission took no action "to either approve or disapprove the project." In fact, in the six years since an SRBC representative came to the farm, nothing was done by the staff.

In his letter, Bielo requested an update on the irrigation use at the Masser operation and, though he included the statement, "We appreciate you cooperation concerning the above matter ...," Bielo wanted the information in writing within the month.

"Since we have received no word from you regarding the project (installing center pivot systems) status, we ask that you provide an update regarding your irrigation operation ... "

What was requested was:

- a detailed description of current irrigation practices;
- details of practices used prior to Jan. 23, 1971, which was the grandfathering of agricultural use;
- a location map showing from where water was being taken and to what fields is was being applied;
- estimates on the maximum and average daily total and consumptive use (the amount of water that plants transpired, or evaporated during the irrigation process) during the irrigation period;
- the amount of any intended increase in water use;
- any available data (facts) on the farm's historic water use.

Masser said he was upset with the letter.

Not only did the agency not provide any information or direction to Masser, it waited six years before following up on Masser's initial effort to let them know what he was doing.

On top of it, the agency now wanted Masser to act quickly to get the SRBC all the detailed data it wanted — data that would require a good amount of time and cost to research and compile.

Masser responded that the only water he was using or intended to use was that which was used by the operation prior to the agency's January 1971 grandfathering cutoff.

The agency is different now, Masser said.

In recent months, the SRBC has more or less publicly apologized for the confusing state under which it had been operating.

In fact, that confusion and uncertainty has been cited as a strong reason for the commission's attempts to restructure all of its piecemeal regulations in a comprehensible, interlocking document and to simplify the process as much as possible.

Masser said he agreed.

In fact, he became involved with efforts to improve the agency's regulations after attending public hearings the SRBC held in 1991 at state Game Commission headquarters in Harrisburg.

That hearing was held to gather public comment on the agency's proposal to implement consumptive use regulations and fees for those who, in effect, were hastening the evaporative (or other) loss of water from the river.

Human activities, such as using river water to generate electricity, can create large, unnatural losses of river water, because it is vaporized into the atmosphere and out of the basin.

Support for regulating these activities has been wide (except of course from those who are being regulated).

However, agricultural organizations and individuals objected strongly to the commission's proposal when it had also targeted the loss of water from the river that comes from irrigating farm crops and watering livestock.

Those consumptive use regulations went through several years ago with a waiver for agriculture and public water suppliers. Agricultural representatives involved generally considered the debate over farmer water use dead.

However, when the commission proposed last year to consolidate the entire package of commission regulations, commission staff reproposed including agriculture, though with 50-percent discounts, etc.

A new set of hearings were held.

That consumptive use proposal would have made water users come up with some acceptable form of emergency water storage, or some offsetting conservation practices, or to pay for the drought-use. It also proposed some registration fees.

Because of the public outcry, and the strength of several arguements that farmers do more to benefit the river's water flow than it consumes, the SRBC has for now set aside its proposed consumptive use regulations, but has vowed that it will not repropose any fees upon the agricultural registration, or use, of water.

In the meantime, Masser has been involved in presenting agriculture's side of the issue to the commission, which has changed staff and commissioners over the years.

The commission has an agricultural advisory committee, and Masser currently chairs. He became involved in 1991, after attending the hearings.

He said that while the previous commission and staff had virtually disregarded agricultural committee concerns, the current commission and staff is listening.

The agricultural advisory committee, including Masser, has been meeting and helped devise the SRBC regulations for registration of water use.

This is half of the regulations and this is the half that is being supported by the agricultural industry in Pennsylvania and Maryland. New York, however, has caused some tension within the agricultural community.

According to published reports, and those involved in the hearing process, the position of the New York basin community is that the SRBC has no right to make them register their water use. It is seen as a threat to their independence and rights to water.

Masser said that this is a mistake.

The registration has been requested by the SRBC, because it needs to know how much water is being pulled out of the ground, out of the streams and ultimately out of the flow of the river.

According to Masser, those in agriculture should take this opportunity, before January 1996, to register the use of their water with the agency, because it is in their best interest.

There is no cost, there is not, nor will there be a charge, and the agency needs the information in order to manage the flow of the river.

Those who don't register may well eventually find that neither the government, nor courts, will acknowledge the historic use of water on a farm if it has not been documented.

And the outlook is that eventually the need to document those water uses on a particular farm will be requested.

Eventually, barring some disaster that reduces human demands on the flows of the river, or some miracle of technology that reduces people's uses of water (it has only been increasing), some interests will be denied access to water.

"I think registration is a good thing. It gives us documentation of water use, a historical record. And although there are no guarantees to water use, it at least gives us consideration in future policy," Masser said.

"That's why I went to the SRBC in 1984, I wanted to let them know what I was doing.

"Water is a limited resource. If agriculture doesn't deal with the issue now the issue will deal with agriculture later, and then we won't be in a position to have too many options."

Family Farm Business

The debate and the policy making process continues.

In the meantime, Masser rotates his fields with three years of small grains and one year of potatoes.

It is part of the soil conservation plan that he has for all his acreage, and it requires him to farm much of his acreage in small grains in order to rotate potatoes well, even though grain production accounts for only about 5 percent of the company's income.

Along with conservation tillage, terracing and trying to maintain healthy farming practices, Masser also knows that the land that his enterprise keeps open will allow recharge of groundwater — the constant source of water for all freshwater streams and rivers.

Without healthy crop agriculture, and without well-practiced livestock production that contributes to keeping local land open for crop production, Masser and others question how long it would take get-rich quick investors to pave over, bulldoze, or otherwise drain those recharge areas.

In fact, Masser and others within the agricultural community have offered that perhaps agriculture, and others who maintain open groundwater recharge areas, should be given some kind of credit by the rest of the community for the amount of groundwater recharge their operations provide.

"I believe in that," Masser said. "It's only fair, and it's the only way to maintain those open areas that everyone benefits from."

Some early estimates on groundwater recharge for the area has suggested that farmland receiving 36 to 42 inches of rainfall per acre/per year recharges about a foot/per acre of water into the aquifer.

"The more land we operate and own, the more water we ought to be allowed to use, because the more land kept open, the more water is available to recharge.

"It's consistent with farmland preservation (goals). We need to want to preserve farmland to continue to get water."

PAPA Sponsors Nutrient Management Seminar, Others Scheduled

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The ball is rolling with nutrient management in Pennsylvania and the first indepth educational event to deal specifically with the subject, as it applies within the state, has been announced.

According to a news release made late last week, an ambitious, three-hour seminar on the state's official nutrient management program has been scheduled to be held 1:30 p.m. — 4:30 p.m., July 11, at the Sheraton Inn Harrisburg-East.

The event is being sponsored by the Pennsylvania Agronomic Products Association (PAPA).

This seminar is being planned for those who want to find out how to become certified, the responsibilities of a nutrient management specialist, the requirements of the nutrient management plan, and the total body of regulations.

Unlike other seminars on nutrient management which have dealt with general manure management concepts, or circumstances not necessarily relevant to Pennsylvania, this educational program is set to offer first-hand insight into the actual state program.

This is so for several reasons:

- On April 19, the Nutrient Management Advisory Board recommended a set of regulations to the Conservation Commission.
- PAPA President William Brubaker is an appointed and active member of the 15-member Nutrient Management Advisory Board. (PAPA and Brubaker are registered with the state for lobbying activities.)
- The state Conservation Commission is expected, in either June or July, to propose a set of regulations to carry out the state's Nutrient Management Act. Those regulations are expected to be based on the recommendations of the advisory board, as well as commission staff.
- The main speakers of the PAPA-sponsored seminar are to be the staff members of the Conservation Commission.

Specifically scheduled to talk are Michael Krempasky, executive secretary for the State Conservation Commission; Lynn Langer, chief of the DER Nutrient Management Section; Doug Goodlander, conservation program specialist; Melanie Sayers, nutrient management coordinator for the state Department of Agriculture; and a to-be-announced representative of the Penn State Department of Agronomy.

By the time of the seminar, the state Conservation Commission is expected to have published its proposed regulations. That means that a 60-day public comment period will have started.

According to the news release, in addition to gaining information for personal use, those who attend this seminar should be better able to make intelligent and informed comments on the issue.

Those wishing to attend the PAPA Nutrient Management Seminar should apply for a reservation as soon as possible, since the meeting capacity is limited to 225 people. The actual deadline on making a reservation is June 30.

The cost of the seminar is $7 per PAPA member; $9 per nonmember. To register, complete a card that requests the names of those attending, affiliation to PAPA, the amount enclosed, and a check for that amount made payable to "PAPA."

The card and check should be mailed to: PAPA, 1408 Mission Rd., Lancaster, PA, 17601.

Other Opportunities

While this seminar may be the best first opportunity to discuss and learn about the program, it will not be the only seminar offered.

In coming months and years, nutrient management education can be expected to be incorporated into many seminars offered (directly or indirectly) through the land grant universities, and state agencies, such as the state Department of Agriculture and the state Department of Environmental Resources, or its heir agency.

This should be especially so as the official certification program portion takes final form and educational updates become mandatory.

And while a public education effort is being made through the state government and land-grant universities, certain sectors within agribusiness, such as PAPA, also can be expected to offer educational seminars.

Of this latter group of seminars, some may or may not have value to those needing to know more about Pennsylvania's official program.

Out of the meetings that pertain specifically to Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act, a division can be made between those designed to be technical and others less technical.

While some extension agents around the state have offered nutrient management-based seminars directed at expanding general knowledge of manure, its components, plant uptakes, application rates, storage, handling, etc., there are some fairly specific seminars scheduled for the near future.

Computer Demonstration

For those interested in learning about a nutrient management computer program that has been developed through Penn State Extension in conjunction with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (formerly Soil Conservation Service), three introductory demonstrations have been scheduled at by Penn State Extension.

All three are to be held from 1

National Officers Teach FFA Makes Positive Impact

development and leadership resulted in setting goals for himself. One of those was to become a state FFA officer. This is not an easily attained goal by any FFA member because of the stiff competition among many qualified individuals.

The goal was especially challenging to Corey, who said, "I am the first African-American and the first urban member to be elected as a national FFA president."

In Illinois, unlike most areas, officers are elected by popularity ballot. Not one to let racial differences stand in his way, but realistic enough to know that his race and urban status might be considered a disadvantage, Corey decided to do the best he could in every area of involvement.

He credits his belief in God and his mother's encouragement to his ability to persevere.

In 1992, he was named FFA vice president for the state of Illinois. After serving on the state level, Corey ran for national office, which requires extensive interviews and written tests on everything from FFA history to ag issues.

Corey said that he learned to concentrate on doing his best and was satisfied that he had done so. Being named president on November 12 at 2:45 p.m. at the national convention in Kansas City, Missouri, in front of 34,500 members, was almost anticlimactic — until it happened.

"It was overwhelming. It's like a Miss America contest with everyone cheering and crying," he said.

His election to the national presidency allows Corey to travel across the nation and even internationally to encourage students — especially minorities — to join FFA for the many opportunites offered.

After a year of FFA duties, Corey will resume his studies at the University of Illinois in ag economics, marketing and sales.

Greg Vetter, FFA's national western region vice president, hails from Wyoming where he helps his family with their 2,400-acre ranch.

Greg's original interest in joining FFA was for the production agriculture training, but he thrived on the communication and leadership training offered.

"The tools are available to learn to do anything you want to do if you take advantage of them," he said. "Any student who takes advantage of the opportunities will gain leadership and personal

Corey Flournoy who is the national FFA president was recently reunited was his former FFA adviser, Marcia Paterson, who is now advisor at the Milton Hershey High School. Corey said that Paterson taught him to take personal responsibility and work out the details for workshops and speeches.

FFA Makes Positive Impact

growth skills to enable them to have a successful career in any area they choose."

Greg has had projects in sheep, beef, and swine, which he has entered in county and state competitions.

To concentrate on his national FFA duties, Greg is taking a year off from his studies as a sophomore majoring in animal science with a business optional.

He'd like to have an ag-business or marketing career, or maybe a lobbying or political career.

Jennafer Neufeld from Kansas is a national vice president representing the central region. Like all the other national officers, Jennafer held a state office before being selected for the national position. She was state secretary.

She is taking a year's leave of absence from Kansas State University where she is majoring in agricultural law. Her career sights are set on becoming a lobbyist for agriculture or a legal consultant for an ag corporation.

Raised on a farm with 80,000 chickens and 1,000 acres, Jennafer did not join FFA until her sophomore year in high school, when the FFA advisor asked her to participate in livestock judging.

"Advisers really make a difference in students' lives," Jennafer said. "I wouldn't be here if my adviser hadn't encouraged me to join."

While many people acquaint Florida with the tourist industry, Trisha Bailey wants them to know that Florida's agriculture industry is neck in neck with the tourist industry in her state.

"We (Florida) have the largest cattle production east of the Mississippi and we are the strawberry capitol of the world," she said.

Unlike most national officers, Trisha does not live on a farm. Her dad works in construction and her mom is a nurse. Trisha's interest in horticulture and forestry prompted her to take agriculture classes in eighth grade. Her exposure to agriculture resulted in personal enlightment to the many different facets of agriculture. Now her enthusiasm for FFA bubbles over.

"There's something for every single person in the (FFA) organization if they give it a chance," she said.

She is taking a dual major in ag communications and sports physiology at the University of Florida. With that unusual combination, Trisha hopes to work in rehabilitating injured rodeo riders and anchor as a farm broadcaster on television.

Travis Hagen, the national secretary, received his introduction to FFA early in life. His dad is a high school agriculture teacher.

Hagen said that California is the number one agricultural state in the nation and has one of the highest FFA memberships of all the states.

In the Chico FFA chapter, Travis participated in production and sales and services. He received the state star agribusiness award and was named state treasurer.

To receive the American Degree, Travis submitted a 17-page application. He read publication after publication to keep abreast of ag issues and current events and spoke at numerous Rotary Clubs and other organizations. But the best thing about FFA involvement, he said, is going to livestock shows and developing friendships that will last a lifetime.

After graduating from California Polytechnic University, Travis wants to teach high school agriculture for at least five years.

"I want to share my love for agriculture with students. It's one way to give something back to FFA," he said.

After that, he hopes to become a marketing specialist for a large agri-business.

Soil Stewardship Week

about 50 farmers and honored guests to the Dan Dee Country Inn. In attendance were Frederick County commissioners David Gray, Ilona Hogan, Terre Rhoderick, Mark Hoke, and Bruce Reeder. Reeder is the liaison for the Catoctin and Frederick Soil Conservation districts. The Commissioners proclaimed Soil Stewardship Week.

Richard R. Holter, Sr., past supervisor of the Catoctin district, retired last year after 31 years of service. He was presented with the Distinguished Service Award and honored with a plaque for his service from 1963-1994. Holter, a dairy farmer from the Braddock Mountain area, said he was stepping aside "to allow somebody else to take over" and offer their input.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for the state of Maryland Royden Powell, III, in rear, demonstrates the partnership of the Frederick Soil Conservation District, represented by Jesse Burall on right, and the Catoctin District, represented by Daniel C. Poole, left.

"Being in there 31 years, I had spent long enough. There are other qualified people that could take over my position," Holter said.

Assistant Secretary Powell talked about soil conservation districts in Maryland, and how the districts' roles are changing with the times. Initially, the districts served farmers. But with changing land use and growing populations, new resource management challenges related to urbanization and subdivision of land have evolved. Soil loss and natural resource management strategies have had to adapt.

In the early 1970s, Maryland enacted one of the first sediment erosion control programs in the country. The technical expertise in erosion control has shifted during the last several decades to the local government, according to Powell. This shift addressed the changing issues related to development. But Maryland conservation efforts work best when agencies and organizations function as a partnership, Powell indicated.

In a graphic presentation, Powell had members of the Catoctin and Frederick Soil Conservation Districts stand under an umbrella. The umbrella represented a common concern for the environment and soil conservation. Also belonging under the umbrella, according to Powell, was the federal government, which Powell referred to as the technical arm of the soil conservation districts, explaining, "The government provides engineering expertise in the areas of soils, wetlands, biology, and resource management."

Local government agencies, concerned with local priorities, also warranted a place under the umbrella; they are involved in sediment and erosion control issues, functioning through agencies such as Planning and Zoning and Environmental Health. Rounding out the picture were the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service and the Board of Education for their technical and educational expertise.

According to Powell, "The best example of the partnership at the state level over the last couple years has been the tributary strategies process." The unique situation in Maryland involving the Chesapeake Bay has led to a comprehensive commitment from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and the District of Columbia to reduce nutrient pollution in the Bay. Nitrogen and phosphorous levels are to be reduced by 40 percent by the year 2000, as mandated by the 1987 revision of the Chesapeake Bay Agreement. The Strategies are considered a local and national model of grassroots strategy, said Powell.

"The strategy Maryland is taking is that everyone has taken part in creating reduced water quality in the Bay, and everyone needs to take part in the solution," explained Beth Horsey, tributary strategy coordinator for the Maryland Department of Agriculture, reached at her office for comment. Excess nutrients from wastewater, agricultural land, and developed land; sediment runoff from farms, construction sites, and other lands; and elevated levels of toxic chemicals have been identified as the three major problems associated with the Bay's decline. The tributary strategies specifically address the first problem; reducing excess nutrients.

"The Catoctin and Frederick Soil Conservation districts are unique in that they are the only districts in the state based on watersheds and historical background," said Dawn Early, district manager for both districts. The Catoctin watershed is mountainous, and thus has characteristically steep slopes and different soils. It is the second oldest district in the state, established in 1939. The Frederick District was created in 1944, when the Monocacy watershed was split into the Carroll and Frederick districts.

David O'Hara, winner of the Speak Off contest, presented his talk on soil and water conservation at the luncheon. Closing remarks were given by Jesse Burall, chairman of the Frederick Soil Conservation District.

The board of supervisors for the Catoctin district consists of Daniel C. Poole, chairman; John Summers, vice chairman; Fred H. Beachley, treasurer; Wilmer H. Keller, assistant treasurer; Richard McBride, supervisor; and G. Paul Edwards, Steve Leatherman, and K. Scott Hood, associates. For the Frederick district, the board is made up of Jesse Burall, chairman; Roger Troxell, vice chairman; C. Ellis Hood, treasurer; George "Nick" Nicholson, Jr., assistant treasurer; Franklin Gladhill, supervisor; and Noel Dingman and Dwight Dotterer, associates. Sarah Holter is the president for the Catoctin/Frederick Auxiliary.

DHIA Members Need To Vote

Chester County DHIA members need to vote on the proposed merger with Pennsylvania DHIA.

They can return their ballots by May 18, or attend the director's meeting on that date at the Chester County Extension office, Suite 370, in the Government Services Center, 601 Westtown Road, West Chester.

Members not casting a vote will be counted as a "yes" vote, approving the merger.

Tunnel Ventilation

(Information in this part of the column is excerpted from a fact sheet by Dan McFarland, Penn State Extension agricultural engineer.)

Those hot, steamy days of summer will be here before we know it. And, along with them will be a drop in milk production, unless some plans are made for summertime cow comfort.

One of the ideas that has gained popularity in recent years for stall barns is "tunnel" ventilation.

Cows can produce 5 gallons or more of moisture per day through respiration. There needs to be an air exchange in the barn to remove this moisture, introduce fresh air, and reduce hot spots.

When the temperature exceeds 75 degrees, cows really appreciate a breeze of 2 to 5 miles-per-hour. A properly designed tunnel ventilation system will provide unifrom air movement the entire width of the barn — feed alleys, service alley, and over the cows.

The system is simple.

Put fans at one end of the barn to draw air from inlets at the opposite end. Most systems are designed for a 2.5 mph "breeze" (220 feet-per-minute) or greater, which results in the air in the housing area being exchanged in one minute or less.

The key measurements are:

• The width times the height of the housing area, multiplied by the desired air speed in feet-per-minute, results in the total fan capaticy required.

As an example, a 38-foot wide barn, that is 8 feet high, results in a surface area of 340 square feet. Multiplying the 304 square feet times an air speed of 220 feet-per-minute results in a fan requirement of 66,880 cubic feet per minute (cfm).

• The inlet area size is calcualted by multiplying 2.5 square feet of inlet for every 1,000 cfm of fan capacity.

As an example, using the above fan capacity, multiply by 2.5 square feet by 67 (a rounded off figure from taking 66,880 cfm divided by 1,000 cfm) and the result is 168 square feet of inlet needed. (Using the width of the barn as the limit for one side of the vent opening needed, divide that into the square feet of inlet needed.) This requires an opening of about 4.5 feet high and 38 feet wide, at the opposite end of the barn.

Some key points to remember when installing and operating a tunnel ventilation system are:

1. It is basically a hot weather system and will not be effective in cold weather. An alternate system is needed for wintertime.

2. A "trap-door" type opening with mesh or grating over the inlet

Nutrient Management Seminar

p.m. to 3 p.m., at the specified sites. No registration is needed.

On May 23, a demonstration is to be held at the Westmoreland County Extension office; on May 24 in the Penn State Agricultural Sciences and Industries Building (ASIB), Rm. 118, University Park; and on May 25 in the Berks County Extension Office.

According to Peter Bohn, one of the creators of the program, the demonstrations are mainly to allow people interested in using the software to see how it is used.

Registration is needed, however, in order to attend one of a series of three actual workshops scheduled for July.

Registration is needed, because each workshop is limited to 18 participants each because of computer access.

These workshops are designed to be full-day, hands-on, computer training sessions.

Three dates have been scheduled — July 10, 12, and 21 — all to be held at the Main Campus of Penn State University, in State College.

For more inforamtion on the computer workshops call Pete Bohn at (814) 865-3774. Or fax a registration to (814) 863-7043.

Background Training

For those wishing to develop or enhance their knowledge of background subjects necessary as a prerequisite to being able to comprehend and complete nutrient management planning training, a series of September workshops have been planned to be held at the Main Campus of Penn State University.

These workshops will not qualify a participant for credits necessary for certification as a nutrient management, but they will help those who intend to participate in mandatory training sessions to be scheduled.

Because the regulations aren't expected to be finalized until at least early fall, an official certification program can't begin until afterward. In the meantime, education toward eventual certification can proceed.

Dr. Douglas Beegle and Bohn, of the PSU Agronomy Department, as well as representatives of the NRCS, DER, the state Conservation Commission, and vocational-agriculture educators have been working together in developing an effective, ongoing educational program that supports the certification of nutrient management planners.

That work is ongoing and proceeding well.

The background workshop series were designed by Beegle and Bohn specifically as opportunities for those who could use the education or refreshing in the subjects in order to be prepared for the eventual certification courses and examinations.

Specifically, on Sept. 12, a conservation planning workshop is to be held; on Sept. 19, a workshop dealing with soil fertility is scheduled; and on Sept. 26, a workshop on manure management has also been set.

To register for any or all of these workshops, call Bohn, or fax a registration.

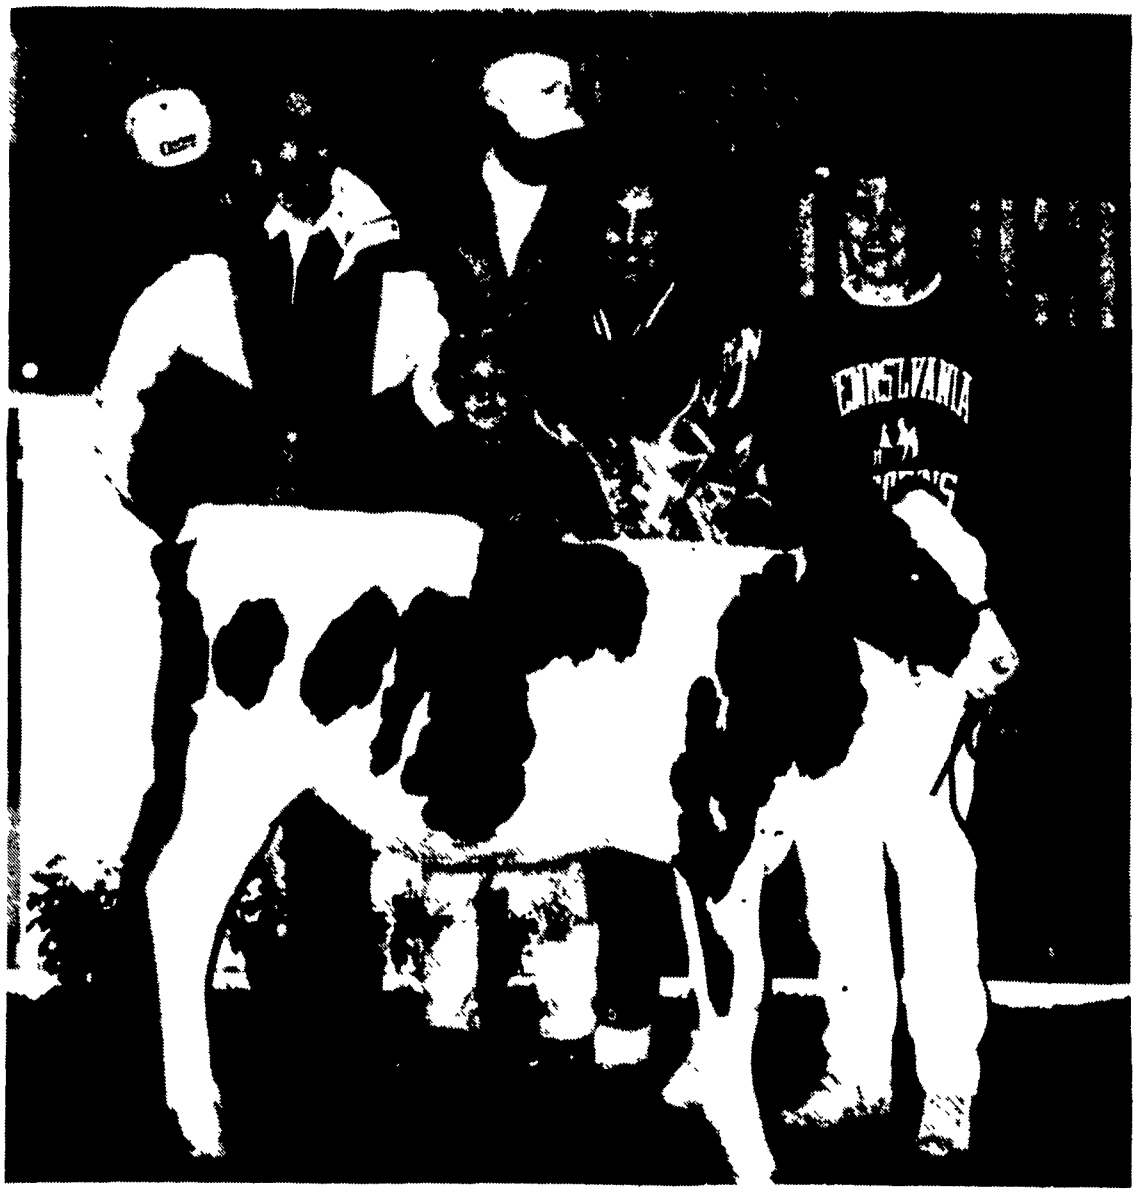
Cumberland Holstein Holds All-Breed Sale



The top seller of the Cumberland County Holstein Club All-Breed Sale was this Holstein calf, Hills-Hope Jed Wilma consigned by David S. Hill and bought by Craig Walton and Don Bream. From the left is Craig Walton, Sally and Dennis Hill representing David Hill, and leadsperson Betsy Walton.

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Members of the Cumberland County Holstein Club made some money and enjoyed themselves at the same time during the club's first All Breed Calf Sale.

Club members earned nearly $14,000 in all by selling 19 animals during the event, which was held at Fountain View Farm & Tower Vue Holsteins, just west of Carlisle. The average price paid per animal during the sale came to $709.

Jeff Reasner, who was chairman of the sale committee, said the purpose of the program was not only to earn money, but also to promote fellowship among the adults and the children who make up the club.

Local support for the sale was evident, since Reasner noted that, except for advertising, everything for the sale, including grain for the buyers, shavings, straw, hay, tanbark and halters for every calf, was donated by area farmers and businesses.

The highest price at the sale was paid for Hills-Hope Jed Wilma, a 5-month-old Holstein calf owned by David S. Hill of Shippensburg. That calf, sired by Juniper Rotate Jed-ET to dam Hills -Hope Astro Winnie, was bought by Craig H. Walton and Don Bream of Carlisle for $1,500.

The most paid for a colored-breed calf was $1,100, bid for Lo-Vi Tasha MK Tena, a 5-month-old Brown Swiss offered by Lonni A. Wickard of Shippensburg. Amy Witmer of Newburg bought that animal, which was sired by Little Cobb Mac Knight by Lo-Vi Tusan Con Tasha-ET.

Creedin C. Comman of Carlisle sold his month-old Holstein Justa Beauty Tesk Krisket to LeAnn Witmer of Newburg for $1,025.

Jonathan Mason of Chestertown, Md., paid $975 to Cathy Wright of Newville for her 5-month-old Milking Shorthorn Summit Vista CIT Cheri Spice.

Dyar-Acres Jemi Balink, a 5-month-old Holstein owned by Jeff and Michele Reasner of Shippensburg, was bought for $925 by Jeremy Fuller of Duncannon.

David R. Walton of Carlisle got $900 for his month-old Holstein Tower Vue Blackstar Kit. That calf was bought by Bradley Reiman of Berlin.

Beshore Farms of New Cumberland took home $850 after selling Beshore Broker Monique, a 5-month-old Holstein, to Warren Buckman of Perkasie.

Bradley Reiman then made two other sellers happy when he paid $800 to Ann and Curtis Day of Shippensburg for their 5-month-old Holstein Tri-Day Patton Pollete.

Two Holsteins went for $700 apiece. Barbara McGillvray sold her 7-month-old Cy-Bar Loverboy Melissa to Bryan R. Smith of New Enterprise and Guy and Sharon Hammond of Carlisle bought 7-month-old Four-Co Dancer Delight from John and Helen Cope of Grantham.

A month-old Jersey offered by Jeff and Michelle Reasner of Shippensburg was bought for $600 by Amanda E. Brant of Mount Union.

Jennifer Kramer of Newville paid $500 to Leo's Dairy of Carlisle for 7-month-old Holstein Leo's Bee Butter Mark.

J. Paul and V. Lorraine Strock of Mechanicsburg got $475 from M. Thomas Sheaffer of Carlisle for their 7-month-old Holstein Stroc-Key Kevin True.

Sheaffer and two other bidders paid $425 each for three other calves: Sheaffer bought Windy-Bank Noel Juggler, a 5-month-old Holstein consigned by Robert H. Jamison of Carlisle; Nathan P. Rhodes of Gettysburg got month-old Holstein Leiblane CC Cheeta from John E. Leib Jr. of Carlisle; and Beidel Brothers of Newburg sold month-old Belshway Kyle Ivory-Pending to J.R. and R.C. Shoemaker of Chambersburg.

Buyers paid $400 each for two animals. Virginia Swartz sold her 6-month-old Jersey Autumn Ridge Bar Rita Roxann to Jeff and Michelle Reasner of Shippensburg, while M. Thomas Sheaffer, in his third purchase of the sale, bought 5-month-old Holstein Leo's Floann Symbol from Leo's Dairy.

Sheaffer was in on the bidding again when he paid $350 to J. Paul and Lorraine Strock for 5-month-old Holstein Stroc-Kay Mara Patti.

SRBC Approves Package Of Revised Regulations

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.)—The Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) on Thursday approved its proposed package of comprehensive regulatory revisions to the non-consumptive water use provisions.

Non-consumptive water use means that the water will be returned to the basin and not permanently lost. The revisions will make the existing regulations easier to understand and help streamline the approval process for ground and surface water withdrawal applications in the basin area.

The regulatory revisions were initially published as proposed in the Federal Register in June 1994 and were the subject of nine public hearings throughout the basin area. Following the many comments received, the SRBC made many significant revisions.

"The public hearing process proved to be extremely valuable to us. In particular, we learned of the many concerns from the agricultural community to our initial proposal and we made the changes accordingly," said Paul Swartz, SRBC executive director.

"In fact, our final regulatory revisions package was supported by many agricultural interests, including PA Farm Bureau, Maryland Farm Bureau, PA Dept. of Agriculture, Maryland Dept. of Agriculture, PA State Grange, PA House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, as well as the SRBC Agricultural Water Use Advisory Committee."

The two substantive revisions in the package are:

1. all new surface water withdrawals greater than 100,000 gallons per day must be approved by the SRBC; and

2. all surface and ground water withdrawals greater than 10,000 gallons per day must be registered with the SRBC upon the consent of the SRBC's member states.

"There are many benefits to the registration program. It would afford existing water users protection from the heavy competition new water users sometimes pose. We strongly believe that it is in the interest of existing users to know what quantity they currently use and to protect their sources. The registration program can help do exactly that," said Swartz.

The regulations, which go into effect immediately, call for many other changes and improvements in the administrative and technical procedures sections.

They include: • Consolidating the purposes and definitions language in one place. • Clarifying which types of water withdrawal/use projects require SRBC approval. • Eliminating the requirement that approved groundwater projects be reviewed every 5 years. • Establishing a process for SRBC to notify local media, municipalities and county planning agencies of pending water withdrawal/use applications. • Specifying the procedures for public hearings. • Giving the SRBC executive director the authority to initiate temporary emergency actions. • Requiring approved projects to be impleis often used when it is across the barn floor so that access to the hay mow is not inhibited.

3. Since there may not be enough wall space at the fan end of the barn, a fan room is constructed in the hay mow. The fans are mounted in the end of the hay mow wall and the floor below the fans is removed, allowing 2- to 2.5-square feet of opening per 1,000 cfm of fan capacity. This area is boxed in, and the air is drawn up from the stable below and exits through the fans. Cover the opening with a sturdy wire mesh as a safety measure.

4. Keep side windows and inlets closed, in order to produce the "tunnel" effect.

If you install a tunnel ventilation system properly, you will appreciate the increased comfort for the cows as well as yourself on those hot summer afternoons. You will also see more milk in the tank and more money in the bank.

EPA To Conduct Groundwater Study In Lancaster County

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—Starting Monday, May 15, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will be conducting a groundwater study which uses red and yellow dyes to trace groundwater flow in Lancaster County.

Though unlikely, residents in Lancaster County, particularly in the Mount Joy and New Holland vicinities, may see red or yellow discoloration of their tap water and local streams for a few hours.

Residents can be assured that these tests are completely safe, and they can continue to use their water supply for drinking, cooking, bathing, dishwashing, and laundry.

The purpose of the dye tracing tests is to gain a better understanding of ground water flow directions and to determine recharge areas of selected drinking water supplies in Lancaster County. This information will be used to protect groundwater from potential contamination caused by certain land uses.

These tests will be conducted with the cooperation of the local water authorities, Franklin and Marshall College, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, the U.S. Geological Survey, and local, state and federal agricultural agencies. The Lancaster County Planning Commission and R.E. Wright Associates are participating with EPA in the Mount Joy area study.

Dye tracing is conducted by injecting ordinary fluorescent dyes into sinkholes, excavations, borings and streams. The dye is moved along the groundwater flow system by rainfall and water injection. Activated charcoal packets are installed in areas where normal groundwater discharge occurs, such as wells and springs. Any dye which flows past the packets is trapped by the charcoal and the quantity is measured in a laboratory. The measured concentration of dye is used to determine approximate groundwater flow velocities. Dye discharge sites relative to injection locations provides information on groundwater flow directions.

mented within three years of their approval. • Authorizing the SRBC to impose penalties and require remedial actions on permit violations.

"We worked very hard and cooperatively with many organizations to get the package to this final step and so I am very pleased with today's action," said Swartz.

This regulatory revision package does not affect the existing sections regarding consumptive water use. Consumptive uses are those operations where the water is used in such a way that it is permanently lost to the Susquehanna River basin area.

The consumptive use portion of SRBC's regulations are to be addressed next. Currently, agriculture and municipal water supplies are exempt.

The Susquehanna River Basin Commission is the governing agency established by a 100-year compact signed on Dec. 24, 1970 by the federal government and the states of New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland to protect and wisely manage the water resources of the Susquehanna River Basin.

If it were human, they'd test it for steroids.

Massey Ferguson's newest platform tractor — the MF 3120T — delivers 110 horsepower from a turbocharged Perkins 1000 Series engine. But you'd swear it was even bigger. That's because the engine's unique Quadram combustion chamber and Dynatorque Power Curve deliver more torque and higher torque backup on less fuel than conventional 110 hp engines

And when you add in the superior performance of Massey Ferguson's exclusive Economy PTO, Dynashift transmission, and optional true 4WD, you've got one powerful performer. So much useable power that the competition can't believe it's real

The Road Less Traveled Leads To Blue Moon Farm

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.)—Every once in a blue moon, someone chooses the road less traveled.

My assignment was to interview a woman blacksmith. Nice twist to a not-so-common hobby. Just jot down the tool names and describe procedures. Simple.

But the road less traveled is often more extraordinary than simple. Abundant with a natural richness seldom seen by those in the fast lane, the road less traveled led me to the Blue Moon Farm where Judy Berger practices an endangered trade, blacksmithing, and where giving and sharing far exceed taking.

"We're stewards of this particular piece of land. It's ours to share," Judy says of the 181-acre farm she and her husband, Winfried, an orthopedic doctor, purchased last year. Nestled among the ridges and rolling fields and pastures just outside Huntingdon, the Bergers share their respite from the rat race with exchange students, a farm manager, tenant farmers, family, friends, visitors, and of course, oodles of animals.

"We've come full circle," Judy said of her and her husband's being raised on farms, she near Allentown and he in Germany. They've raised four children, the youngest of whom is a fulltime blacksmith in Texas. "It was always a dream of ours, to move back to the land."

The soul-soothing sounds of nature on this scantly-mechanized farm are interrupted on occasion when Judy, a juried blacksmith, fires the forge or turns on the power hammer in her blacksmith shop.

"Iron is a wonderful material to work with," Judy says, sprinkling water on surrounding chunks of coke to prevent its spread and to encourage a hotter fire in the center.

"Coke is to coal as charcoal is to wood," she informs me as she prepares to weld two iron pieces together. When the irons turn red hot, she spoons on a compound called flux, which could be borax or sand or a commercial flux. With a trained eye, Judy pulls the irons from the fire with tongs, spatters sparks of residue flux across the cemented floor, quickly places the iron on the anvil, and strikes the top and bottom making them one. Grasping a steel brush, she scrapes off any residue flux she doesn't want pounded into the finish. To taper the end and draw out the piece further, Judy turns to her latest purchase, a power hammer. The heavy, thumping hammer pounds the still glowing iron. This particular piece will become a twisted basket from which will hang an iron chandelier.

"I make chandeliers, candle holders, sign brackets, hinges, inside railings for kitchens, outside railings for steps or for security purposes, ornamentals, reproduction hardware, fireplace tools, and kitchen tools such as ladles and forks."

Ornamentals include one of her current projects, creating from iron a miniature representative of each type of animal on their farm—goats, sheep, pigs, geese, wild turkeys, ducks, chickens, horses, one cow, one milking goat, peacocks and peahens—all of which will be worked into a railing for the patio with a wood top on which to sit.

Her most ambitious project hangs above the blacksmith shop door.

"It's a spit jack or a clock jack. It runs with a rope and drum. The weight is wound up and slowly falls down turning the meat on the spit in front of the early kitchen hearths. The idea for this design came from different places, museums. I finally found the one I wanted in Williamsburg," she said.

Judy learned filing and finishing from Peter Ross, the master blacksmith at Williamsburg. She studied advanced blacksmithing with her mentor Francis Whitaker in North Carolina. It was Whitaker who encouraged her to share blacksmithing with others before it becomes lost.

"If we don't share it, it's not going to be around," Judy explains. "There were so many blacksmiths in the past, but there was also secretism, to protect their trademark. Now there are not enough blacksmiths to go around, and we need to share the trade."

Judy will be going just that when she leaves for North Carolina this month to teach a blacksmithing course. She loves to meet older blacksmiths who still have, so to speak, an iron in the fire or who remember how their fathers practiced what was once an integral part of their lives. She is a member of the Artist Blacksmiths of North America, a 25-year-old organization devoted to demonstrating, showing, and sharing the trade.

Judy's blacksmith shop houses most of what a smith would need—a forge with bellows, an anvil, treadle hammer, tongs, and hammers.

"This is a swage we used for shaping the sections of a large rosette for the dining room ceiling," Judy says pointing to a three-foot high tree trunk with the figure of a leaf carved in the top. "If I were making leaves, they would all be the same shape and size. Nearby is a more traditional swage block."

Lined along the walls are more handmade swages of all shapes and sizes whose main purpose is to mold hot iron. One in particular

(Turn to Page B3)

Judy Berger uses a kitchen stove to steam thin pieces of wood to make oval Shaker boxes, another hobby of hers.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Welding within the forge takes a practiced eye. Flux is added to help fuse two pieces of iron.

Shown here with her latest purchase, a power hammer, blacksmith Judy Berger pounds two pieces of hot iron to ensure a good weld.

Part of farm manager Sean Fowler's job on the 181 acre farm is to care for the sheep herd. His latest addition to the farm is the movable solar powered electric fence. The white strands alert deer to keep out and sheep to stay in.

Blue Moon Farm

has grooves and bubbles in it for shaping kitchen cabinet handles.

"That's the nice thing about blacksmithing. You make what you need."

The Berger's home and her blacksmith shop are built from the logs, timbers, and boards from an old barn. It faces a man-made pond where two mountain streams converge. Behind it is their root cellar in the side of a bank, the smokehouse, and the beginnings of a sugar shack (for processing maple syrup), being built by farm manager Sean Fowler.

Sean came to the Blue Moon Farm from Connecticut in November 1992.

He said, "I manage the animals, bale hay, keep the buildings and equipment in good shape. We are striving to be more self sufficient, but you need neighbors. We get a good supply of corn from our one neighbor."

When Sean first moved to the farm, some land was swampy. They enrolled in conservation programs to build the pond and some stone strips in drainage areas. They also planted six fruit trees and six Niagara grape vines.

Tenant farmers Sam and Katy Reist live in the original log-exposed farmhouse. They sell organic vegetables at the market in Huntingdon and to regular customers who pay for a guaranteed amount of vegetables throughout the year.

The old barn with the shingle roof houses the barnyard menagerie. A greenhouse parallels, for a short distance, the ¾ mile long lane that connects the Blue Moon Farm to the main road. Even with the expressway not far from their farm, the Bergers continue to choose the road less traveled. And, as Robert Frost says in his poem The Road Not Taken, "I took the one less traveled by. And that had made all the difference."

If anyone is interested in ornamental wrought iron work such as is made at the Blue Moon Forge, write to Judy Berger at Route 1, Box 196B, Huntingdon, PA 16652.

The Road Not Taken
by Robert Frost

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood,
And I—
I took the one less traveled by
And that has made all the difference.

When we designed the 540, we knew you wanted a higher capacity round baler with versatility and convenience. We also knew you liked your tractor.

Truth is, you can keep your present tractor. Because with the 540 attached, all you need is a minimum 45 PTO hp tractor. We built the 540 with all the features of a large baler but in a compact, low-profile design. The direct-feed, open-throat design makes for fast bale starts and easy operation, and the variable chamber makes bales from 30" to 51".

You'll be able to handle a wide variety of crops with great maneuverability. All with your current tractor.

So stop in at your AGCO/Hesston dealer listed here and ask about our flexible financing plans for the 540. Or our wide selection of other equipment, all backed by the AGCO Warranty Program. Hesston. It'll change the way you look at hay fields forever.

With summer coming fast, lots of folks are planning ahead for their vacations.

Vacations are generally planned around things we like to do — even if it's just nothing for a day or two. Visiting family and friends, sightseeing, outdoor activities, sporting, educational and cultural events all sound like great vacation plans. But I would never have guessed the numer one item at the top of a "things we like to do on vacation" statistical list I recently ran across: dining out.

While we like to eat, I can't remember a vacation for which dining out was the prime focus. But it did bring to mind some meals eaten out that became especially memorable. And I do mean meals eaten "out."

One particularly breathtaking evening of dining occurred in the beautiful mountains outside Sun Valley, Idaho, camping with our daughter and son-in-law. A particular treat for them had been sweet corn, purchased from a roadside farm stand earlier in the day and steamed in the husk over an open campfire. It was the first sweet corn they'd eaten in two years after leaving York County.

While they reveled in its delicious flavor, darkness fell and a gigantic, white moon crept up over the tall peak across a small stream. A truly wonderful memory of dining "out."

In a different part of Idaho, two years later, five of us in the extended family huddled around another campfire. As a gray jay flew in to snatch bits of bread we tossed, the sun poked through the tall pines growing at 8,000 feet to begin thawing the ice frozen to our breakfast table that 28-degree, July morning.

And, dining out by a roaring breakfast fire was a welcome alternative after a night of freezing in our sleeping bags, in tents. Warmed by the fire, we discovered that our stiff joints still worked.

Dining out was a genuine high point of a recent weekend visit with friends who live 100 miles west of us. While there are several routes which can be taken to their mountain farm, on pretty days we favor making a portion of the journey on Route 30, where it climbs, sky high, over Tuscarora Mountain.

At the highway's summit is a side trip to a perch on the mountain's sometimes jagged spine, on a rock outcropping called The Pulpit. Hawk watchers frequent this site and we've seen numerous birds of prey during our few stops, including a mature bald eagle which inspected us one breathtaking afternoon.

As has become custom for The Farmer and I on these occasional visits, time and weather allowing, we stopped at a nearby small market for sandwiches for dining out at the peak. Toting those on the short hike to the peak, along with a pair of field glasses, we soon discovered there would be lots of company during our short stay.

Parked wing-to-wing on the steep, grass-and-rock slope were 17 hang-gliders in cheery, neon colors. Clustered near the peak were their pilots and assorted assistants, some pacing inpatiently, waiting for the stiff wind pouring over the peak to slow so they could get airborne.

During our half-hour vigil with the gusty wind, The Farmer had to remove his hat to keep it from blowing off his head and down the mountain and the hang-glider pilots never got to hang out under their gossamer wings. Maybe next time.

Looking back, those impromptu, informal and inexpensive meals, out, are more special in our memories than the little fancy "dining out" we've ever done.

We do enjoy dining. Out. Way out.

Two Fair Officials Receive Executive Certification

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Two Lehigh Valley fair officials are designated as Certified Fair Executives by the International Association of Fairs and Expositions. Bonnie Charles Brosious, marketing director of The Allentown Fair, and Beverly Gruber, who serves in various capacities with four Pennsylvania fairs including The Schnecksville Fair, were awarded the distinction at the association's annual spring management conference hosted this year by The Arkansas State Fair.

To qualify for certification, candidates must have demonstrated extensive service to their individual fairs and the fair industry. The association selects only 12 recipients from more than 3,200 North American fairs each year. Martin H. Ritter, president of The Allentown Fair, was certified in 1987. Including Brosious and Gruber, there are now six Certified Fair Executives in Pennsylvania.

Brosious joined The Allentown Fair in 1982 as its public relations director. Over the years, she developed the fair's first marketing department. As its director, she is currently responsible for fair programming, buying talent, advertising, promotions and public, media and corporate sponsor relations.

Bonnie C. Brosious

Bevery Gruber

Brosious is a frequent seminar leader at the international fair association's national and district meetings and has been a three-time judge of its annual communications awards. She has had an article about buying big-name talent published in the national touring magazine, Performance.

Brosious serves as secretary of The Lehigh Valley Convention and Visitors Bureau and on the board of The Whitehall Township Chamber of Commerce. She resides in Whitehall with her husband Carl and three children.

THE FAMILY GROWS ALONG WITH VEGETABLES

By 1945, optimists saw the end of the war but not the end of "gardening for victory." Even President Roosevelt had to ask people to continue gardening.

Was Victory Gardening successful? In 1944, 40% of all the fresh vegetables in the United States were grown in Victory Gardens. In 1995, vegetable gardens are not nearly as common. Today, less than 18% of the gardening public grows vegetables.

Victory Gardens had the whole family involved including the children. Here's two victory gardening memories of children working in the garden.

The children did help in the Victory Gardens — there was no laying in bed. The sun rose and you got up and put on your old boots and clothes and went out and helped in the garden. One of the more trying times was when the potato bugs were bad. We got up before the dew was off the plants. My father would put lime in a burlap sack and we dusted each potato plant. The lime would get in our noses and eyes. We'd be sore before the potato patch was completely limed.

Being a child in elementary school during the war, my parents moved to a Northern York County home with a 1½ -acre truck patch. I remember feeling like Alice in Wonderland. I had aisles going down the middle of tall corn and sections of peas, beans, and whatever. You could go out and break a pod open and wow: a black-eyed pea. I remember going into a neighboring corn field and following a trailing pumpkin vine to a huge jack-o-lantern.

Victory gardeners of all ages did a lot of raking. They started by raking out lumps of dirt or stones that might hinder seedling growth and development of plants.

When planting small seeds, Victory Gardeners needed to make sure their rows were straight and uniform. They used a string as a guide. Also, they used the handle of a hoe and covered the seeds lightly with ¼ inch or so of soil. Use a hoe or scuffle hoe to remove weeds while they are small. Onion sets are sown as early in the spring as possible. Place them about 4 inches apart in the row.

A paper collar around the base of plants like tomatoes, sunk in the ground about 1 inch will help to keep cutworms from cutting the plants off at ground level. A small piece of paper layed flat on the soil around cabbage kept cabbage maggots from attaching the roots. Large insects like Colorado potato beetles can be crushed between the thumb and forefinger.

Interested in staking? Tie beans to poles so they climb naturally from left to right; otherwise they may slide down the pole. Tomatoes trained on a 6-foot pole set firmly in the ground will produce earlier, firmer fruit that is cleaner and disease-free. Fasten ties to the stakes every 12 inches. Allow blossoms to swing free of the stakes.

Packard Joins Adams County Extension

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Terri Lynne Packard has been appointed to the Penn State University Cooperative Extension staff as 4-H/youth agent and assigned to Adams County.

A native of Troy in Bradford County, she prepared for college at Troy High School and earned her bachelor of science degree from Penn State in June 1993, majoring in dairy and animal science.

While in college, Packard was active in the Dairy Science Club, served as an advocate for the College of Agricultural Sciences, and was president of Sigma Alpha, a professional agricultural sorority. She served as manager of the student Dairy Exposition and editor of the Dairyman. A member of the Dairy Judging Team, she was named 1991 Distinguished Junior Member by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and, in 1993, was named Outstanding Senior in Dairy Science at Penn State.

During the summer of her college years, Packard worked on the family farm, Pack-Herd Holsteins, with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Richard Packard and a younger sister and brother, and cared for her own herd of 20 cows.

Following graduation she worked as Marketing Promotion Coordinator for Sire Power, Inc., Tunkhannock, until March 1994, when she assumed the extension dairy agent responsibilities in Bradford County while the agent was on assignment in Poland. Since December 1994, she has filled the dairy agent position in Susquehanna County while that agent took the Poland assignment.

Tribute To Mothers

Americans have officially celebrated Mother's Day since 1914 when Anna M. Jarvis of Philadelphia originated the idea to establish a nationwide day to honor mothers.

Celebrated the second Sunday in May, Mother's Day has become an important day for families to honor mom and express there feelings for her.

This week's column is dedicated to honoring the mothers of our readers. Happy Mother's Day!

BREAKFAST SPECIAL

In the bottom of any size pan, place a layer of hash brown potatoes, a layer of scrambled eggs made with milk (still moist). Sprinkle with chipped ham or fried bacon. Top with your favorite shredded cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

My mother, Ruth Rutt, makes this for breakfast a lot, especially when they go to the mountains. Mom has five grandsons, ages 8 years to 11 months. She is a great mom to all her five children. Happy Mother's Day.

We would like to pay tribute to our mother Alverna. Mom is an excellent cook and baker. A memory we have is when we traveled home from Boston, at that time, John was in 1-W service. We looked forward to seeing the family, and eating the wonderful treats mom left on the table for us. The shoo-fly pie and the Swedish molasses cake . . . um good. The Risky Business Of Pre-Adolescence Children of any age can be challenging to parents, but when children hit their "middle years" or pre-teen years, I see parent anxiety increase. Changes happen rapidly, and parents wonder if the teen years will really be as awful as so many people say. Add to that the concerns about their children making transitions to middle or junior high schools where they may face new peer pressures involving drugs, sex, alcohol, or rebellious or destructive behavior.

Anne Petersen, former Dean of the College of Health and Human Development at Penn State writes, "We know that young adolescents are argumentative, sometimes obnoxious. Parents throw in the towel, and that is the worst thing they can do. Adolescents need to know that parental support is there."

She goes on to describe how changes in society make it easier for young teens and parents to disconnect — crazy work hours, lots of kids having access to cars, divorces and separations. She continued, "Parents need to know that when [researchers] ask adolescents, especially young adolescents, who is most important to them, they say their parents, even if the parents are reporting conflict." Parents are NOT powerless. They don't have to sit back and just watch this roller coaster period pass. They can stay engaged in their kids' lives. Like so many other important parenting tasks it requires being available and offering lots of listening time. Petersen recommends that parents provide, "unconditional love, firm guidelines, and strong expectations."

Parents need to be ready to listen and answer questions about lots of topics including sexuality. Over 50 percent of teens feel they can't talk to their parents about sexual matters and also don't think they get the information they need in classes at school. If those sources don't work, they naturally look to friends, media and other sources for their information. As a parent, is that what you want? How can moms and dads become "askable parents?"

First try to be open to questions in general. Why do things like the bombing in Oklahoma City happen? What do you think about the death penalty? What would you do if I dyed my hair purple? By listening and exploring these questions with children, you make it more likely that they'll also ask you about sexuality issues.

Second, get the facts. Read. Know everything you can know about teen development. If conversations make you uncomfortable, admit that to your child, but don't use that as an excuse to stop communicating. When your child asks a question, begin by responding, "Tell me what you already know." This allows you to affirm what is correct and correct misinformation. Share your values with your child. Don't force the values on your child, but stand strong in stating what you believe.

Third, expect to answer the same question many times. Children need time to think about what you've said and may need to hear an explanation several times. Also, don't worry about giving too much or too little information. If you give too little, the child will come back with more questions. If you give too much, the child will hear what he can use and discard the rest.

Finally, not only can parents be available but they can also encourage their children to develop friendships with positive older teens/adults. I've been spending time with four high school girls recently. One of their mothers stopped me, and thanked me for taking time to care about her daughter. She said, "It's nice to have people who can give my kids something that I, as a mother, can't give." She was right. There are some roles that parents can't fill in their children's lives. Even in those cases, parents can help direct their children to people who can support their development in a healthy way.

The pre-teen and teen years can be risky ones. As a parent, you play an important role in supporting your child as she makes adjustments and decisions. Your input matters.

QUESTION — Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville, would like a recipe for clear cranberry jelly that can be molded in shapes.

ANSWER — Gladys M. High, Ephrata, and Leah Fisher, Gordonville, wanted a recipe for pepper jelly. Thanks to Tula Elvin, Greencastle, who sent a red pepper jelly recipe and a jalepeno pepper recipe. Both these recipes are excellent served with cream cheese and crackers. To serve, place an 8-ounce block of cream cheese on a serving plate and spoon the jelly over it.

Jalepeno Pepper Jelly

7 or 8 jalepeno peppers
3 or more cayennes or red chilis (depends on how hot you like it)
2 medium-sized green peppers, seeded, cut into pieces
1½ cups white vinegar
1 package powdered pectin
6 cups sugar
6-8 drops green food coloring

Sterilize 5 or 6 half-pint jars, lids, and rings — keep hot.

Cut hot peppers in half, discard stems and remove as many seeds as preferred. Coarsely chop the hot peppers.

Place hot peppers, green peppers, and a half cup vinegar into a food processor, whirl until very finely chopped.

Pour into a 5-quart pot. Use remaining vinegar to rinse the food processor, then add to pot. Stir in pectin. Over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil, stirring constantly. Add sugar and food coloring, continue stirring until mixture returns to a boil. Let jelly boil for exactly one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and skim off foam.

Pour hot jelly into the jars, filling to ⅛ -inch of the tops. Wipe rims. Secure lids and rings. Cool away from drafts.

Red Pepper Jelly

7 large red bell peppers
2 cups cider vinegar
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons chili powder
10 cups sugar
⅔ cup lemon juice
2 3-ounce pouches liquid pectin

Sterilize 14 half-pint jars, lids, and rings — keep hot.

Cut peppers in half, discard seeds and stems. Cut peppers into pieces, whirl in a food processor until finely chopped (about 4 cups).

In large kettle, combine pepper pulp and juices, vinegar, salt, and chili powder. Using high heat, bring to a boil, boiling rapidly for 10 minutes. Stir occasionally. Remove from heat, stir in sugar and lemon juice.

Return to heat, bring to a boil. Stir in pectin and boil, stirring constantly for exactly one minute. Remove from heat and skim off foam.

Pour hot jelly into jars, filling within ⅛ -inch of tops. Wipe rim. Secure lids and rings. Cool away from drafts.

ANSWER — Teena Fuoss, Unityville, wanted to know how to can sweet potatoes. Thanks to Carol Pretz, Middleburg, who writes that she cans sweet potatoes like canning fruit. She makes one part sugar to 4 parts water, brings it to a boil and keeps it hot.

Clean, peel, and cut up sweet potatoes in 1½ -inch lengths. Pack into wide-mouth quart jars. Pour boiling syrup over the ingredients, leaving one-inch head space. Seal. Can in boiling water bath for 3 hours or pressure can at 10 pounds for 90 minutes.

FOOD FOR BUSY PEOPLE

"I am lucky if I get to eat breakfast before I go to sleep at night!"

Does this sound like you? Are you too busy to cook and eat traditional meals?

It's a challenge to live a busy lifestyle and still eat nutritionally. Many people do not eat three-balanced meals a day. But, rather, they "graze."

Although grazing can be fit into a healthy diet, I need to point out that a time/motion expert found that in the long run, eating three meals a day takes less time then grazing. Grazers sometimes forget what they have eaten. At the end of the day, they might have consumed much more than planned. To avoid this, grazers should have planned snacks. Select nutrient-dense foods. Examples of healthy snacks include: fresh and dried fruits, juice, low-fat crackers, raw vegetables, rice cakes, and unsweetened cereal.

Don't go for more than five hours without eating. Primarily your body will use up its store of glucose. Ultimately, this means you will probably have diminished mental abilities. Skipping meals, especially breakfast, will lower your metabolism, and you will gain weight. Many people will eat one large meal a day. This overwhelms the body with calories, thus the body needs to store the calories it doesn't need. That can result in increased fat — on the waist, the hips, the thighs, etc.

Use the food pyramid as a guide to healthy eating. One easy way to remember the food pyramid is to think "6-5-4-3-2." You need six servings of grains, five servings of fruits and vegetables, four to seven ounces of meat, three servings of beans a week, and two servings of milk products. (I'm not sure you need to have three servings of beans a week, but it fits the equation!)

Frozen meals are another quick option. Be careful because many frozen meals are high in fat, as well as sodium. The following tips come from Evelyn Tribole's book, Eating on the Run.

- Oriental style meals tend to be lower in fat and calories.
- Cheese sauce dishes and potpies are usually high in fat and calories.
- Plain frozen vegetables are an easy nutritional bargain.
- Salisbury steaks generally have excessive fat.
- Avoid breaded chicken or fish and hearty man types of meals.

It takes some work, but you can eat a healthy diet while on the run.

A Farmer's Journal Brings History Alive

LORETTA GOLDEN
Cambria Co. Correspondent

PORTAGE (Cambria Co.) — Webster's Dictionary defines "journal" as "an account of day-to-day events" or a "record of experiences, ideas, or reflections kept regularly for private use." In 1866, James Itell began keeping a journal and continued to do so for a period of six weeks. At the time he began his diary, Itell was a 16-year-old farmer who lived in the Portage-Munster area of Western Pennsylvania. The journal consists mainly of "one-liners" — some sentences, phrases, and even just single words. It also contains historical facts and agricultural recordkeeping.

This diary was the impetus for a project coordinated by Portage Area High social studies teacher, Gary Yusko, and St. Joseph elementary teacher, Kathleen Shuler. Yusko is also the president of the Portage Area Historical Society and Shuler is the director of the Portage Station Museum. Yusko's eighth grade Social Studies class researched and presented a program for approximately 500 students from the Portage area.

Currently, the museum is featuring a farming exhibit entitled "To Everything There Is A Season — A Farm Journal." This exhibit is based on the journal of James Itell. All of the students toured the museum, heard brief talks by museum volunteers concerning agriculture during the 1800s and were then shuttled by school bus to Crichton-McCormick Park in Portage. At the park, Yusko's class was busy preparing food similar to that described in the 1860s journal. All 500 students were treated to tastes of sausage, bacon cooked over open fire, buckwheat pancakes, pure maple syrup, popcorn popped over open fire, pumpkin butter, mountain pies, homemade butter, apples and apple cider, corn mush, and everyone's favorite — homemade ice cream. The class even rented a large hand-crank ice cream freezer (Made 3 gallons at a time) from a local hardware store.

Besides the food items one of the highlights was hearing the students speak of life during the 1860s. A few described 1800's baseball and croquet and eighth-grader Nick Gruse, dressed as a Confederate soldier, captivated his younger audiences with descriptions of field hospitals during the Civil War.

Quite a bit of planning and effort went into the day and it was a learning experience and fun time for most who attended. Fifth-grader Chalsea Kline especially enjoyed the talk on hog butchering and came to realize through this discussion that no part of the hog was wasted. Everything was used for something.

The students who presented the day-long program gained an appreciation for this "hands-on" learning and a different way in which to pput their research to work. They also enjoyed doing this for the younger students to help them to better understand life during the Civil War period of our country.

One of the leisure activities which James Itell enjoyed during the 1860s and 1870s was "ballooning." Draw a picture of what you think a hot air balloon looked like at this time.

Sam Timura, school administrator, demonstrating sausage making for this group of boys.

Jenny Godish passing out popcorn which she popped over an open fire.

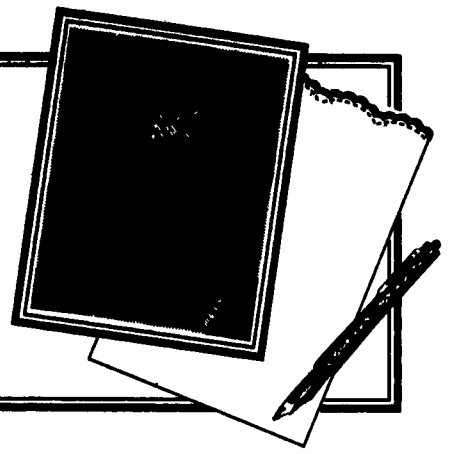
Nick Gruse, eighth grader dressed as a Confederate Soldier, is discussing gun powder, field hospitals, and lack of anesthesia during the Civil War. If a soldier was injured, he'd have to "bite the bullet" or a piece of wood for the pain!

Natalie Kittell and Beth Golden making buckwheat pancakes from locally grown buckwheat. Buckwheat was mentioned many times in Itell's journal. It appears to have been a staple in this area in the mid 1800s.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



The other week my husband and I finally took time to try out his camper. We drove to a camping ground in Snyder County and paid for one night. We were given a spot surrounded by many, many other campers. The only thing that I liked about it was a nearby babbling brook.

We went fishing in the evening in Walker Lake and I not only caught several pan fish but I got a 16-inch beautiful bass, which my husband said that I must not keep as it wasn't in season. It was such a nice, big fish.

Then we stayed in our small camper, about the size of my kitchen, for a second night. We went fishing again and Allen caught a 13-inch bass which we returned to the lake. Probably we'll not be able to catch them in June when the season opens.

One side trip was to "Woodward Cave" east of State College. The Seneca Indians knew of this cave and used it for religious ceremonies. It was opened to the public in 1925. The temperature remains at 48 degrees all year. Our visit was unusual in that we toured the cave with a big busload of third graders. So, our trip through was a noisy affair.

I'd never used a gas stove before and have a lot to learn. Maybe this way I can get my husband to help with the cooking. In the mornings the temperature dropped to 50 degrees inside.

As it was a stressful drive from Lancaster County, we discussed leaving the camper for a year. After driving around the area, we found a nice spot high above the other campers with woods on three sides. And, to think that we planned to only stay for one night!

To Everything There Is A Season

LORETTA GOLDEN
Cambria Co. Correspondent

PORTAGE (Cambria Co.) — When James Itell began keeping a journal in January 1866, he probably didn't realize that it would be instrumental in piecing together a little of this area's agricultural history. His grandson, Pat Itell of Portage, is amazed that the book, which he's had for many years, found stored in a trunk in the attic of his home, has created so much interest.

The Portage Station Museum has focused on this journal to create an exhibit entitled "To Everything There Is a Season — A Farm Journal." Many local farmers have contributed items to this exhibit and the museum director, Kathleen Shuler was surprised to find that so many of these tools are still in working condition.

A copy of the journal is displayed on the first floor of the museum. The journal covers a period of six years from January 1866 through December 1872. An entry was made each day — basically "one-liners" — sometimes a sentence, but many times merely a phrase or even just a few words. Along with the journal some family letters and a list of teachers from the "Itell School," one of the first in the Portage area, are included at the museum. The school was built in 1829 on land donated by the Itell family and James later taught there. There are references to his teaching days throughout the journal.

Shuler comments that "the display includes horse-drawn implements, hand-held tools, and items rarely seen today. The visitor can follow the farm theme through spring and summer with harrows and a potato digger, hay knives, corn planters, and more." Hunting, trapping butchering, and blacksmithing equipment highlight the autumn and winter display on the second floor.

James Itell was born on a farm along Munster Road in Portage, in 1860. His journal gives a glimpse into the post-Civil War era of the Portage area and his life as a young farmer. He was only 16 years old when he began keeping this daily account of his life. Upon reading some of the entries one gets the impression that he was a hard-working farmer, interested in the weather, as all farmers are. Single words describe some days: wet, cold, stormy. On days such as these he busied himself with things such as "putting in window" or "hauling wood."

His entries for September 1866 include: "thrashing for John (James' brother); helping John to clean oats; killed a sheep; fixed the machine; cutting buckwheat; sowed the rye; hauled two bushel of wheat to mill; plowing."

Local farmer, Vince Golden, who has grown and marketed buckwheat for a number of years, notes that it is interesting to read so many references to buckwheat throughout the journal. Apparently buckwheat was more of a staple crop in this area during the 1800s than it is today. Other crops mentioned throughout the journal are wheat, corn, rye, oats, hay, flax and beans.

James also helped with the butchering. The entry for December 7, 1867 is as follows: "Killed our hogs 4 hog 375 lbs." Itell seemed to be very interested in record-keeping, and perhaps numbers in general. Weights for everything butchered are included. He also recorded bushels of grain taken to the mill, the number of gallons of molasses and syrup made, and even the number of fish he caught when engaged in what appeared to be a favorite leisure activity. "Plowing. Was fishing. Caught 75 fish." (June 14, 1866) That paints the picture of being a good day!

James makes mention of different church services which he attended throughout the years. Apparently, his religion was an important part of his life. He also kept a record of the amount of money expended for church purposes. On May 7, 1871 he "rented a pew" for $12 and on November 6, 1871 he contributed $1 for coal at the church.

An agricultural record for each year was kept. In January, 1870, Itell sold one bushel of flax seed for $2. On November 23, he sold "a hog weighing 160 lbs. at 10½ cts per lb. $17.60."

Leisure activities are described, and besides fishing, Itell enjoyed attending dances, sledding, picking berries, and ballooning.

On Sunday, December 1, 1872, the Itell journal reads: "On account of my being absent from home and other inconveniences I have ceased to keep accounts any longer."

Last week, 500 students from the Portage and Forest Hills area toured the museum where they heard talks by museum volunteers on various aspects of farm life during the 1800s. This special workshop, sponsored by the Portage Station Museum and the Portage Area Historical Society, with cooperation by the Portage Area School District, gave the students a better insight into the area's past. One of the "hits" was Portage area farmer, Bob Yetsko, with his description of "hog butchering."

Since Itell spent some time as a teacher, an 1800's school room is also set up on the first floor. Tenth graders, Jen Koenigsburg and Claire Wagner, acted as 1800's teachers. "Miss Wagner" admonished her "class" not to jump into mud puddles during recess.

The journal itself has become a valuable "teaching tool" in some of the area schools. Shuler pointed out that "students from the Portage Area Elementary-Middle School, St. Joseph School, and Penn Cambria Elementary School in Lilly have created dioramas depicting some of the activities mentioned in Itell's writing. Fishing, logging, cherry picking, maple sugaring, and hot air ballooning have been recreated.

Gary Yusko, Portage Area social studies teacher and also the president of the Portage Area Historical Society, along with Shuler were instrumental in helping to recreate the 1860's day for the students. After the tour of the museum the students were shuttled by bus to Crichton-McCormick Park in Portage where they were "treated" to food indicative of the 1860s. Mr. Yusko's eighth-grade class prepared homemade butter, pumpkin butter, sausage, popcorn, buckwheat pancakes, and everyone's favorite — homemade ice cream. Some of the eighth graders were dressed in period clothing and gave short talks (which they previously researched) on many aspects of life in the 1860s.

Shuler and Yusko feel that this "hands-on" learning was a valuable experience for all.

The display "on a tour of farm life of days gone by" is open to the public from 1-4 p.m. Wednesdays and 1-5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Admission is free. The exhibit will run through mid-June.

Love still blooms for these couples who met each other through the Rural Youth organization. From left, kneeling: Stewart and Anna Rentschler, Ida and Allen Risser. Rural Youth Bring Back The Fun They Used To Have

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) — Bob Groff showed up in his bib overalls and plaid shirt at the Rural Youth of Lancaster County Reunion Banquet held at Hershey Farm Restaurant last Saturday.

"I wore this for three reasons," Groff said as he welcomed about 90 guests, who wore their Sunday best for the annual banquet. "Number one, I didn't have time to change because I came right from the cow stable. Two, I feel more comfortable in this. And, number three, I only have one white shirt and I needed to save it for Sunday morning."

As master of ceremonies, Groff interspersed many jokes and stories between introducing the evening's activities. His remarks brought back "the fun we used to have" and helped fulfill the evening's purpose for "fun, fellowship, and food."

The Rural Youth of Lancaster County was organized in 1937 by former 4-H and FFA students to provide social and educational activities for young people.

The former members eagerly recounted the fun they created between the years of 1937 through 1952. They sang some of the old songs that Roy Brubaker said make up a great part of the rural meetings. His wife Martha Jane played the piano just like old times. And Anna Shreiner Rentchler recited some poetry, a popular event in the years before teen-agers relied on movies and television to entertain them.

Many of the couples attending the banquet said that it was through Rural Youth activities that Cupid struck and the love that sprouted resulted in marriage.

Although the majority seemed to have found their life's mate through the organization, there were a few such as Ed Dieffenbach, who said that although he dated several members, it wasn't until he went back to college that he found his wife Jane.

Dieffenbach was an Iowa boy who came to the county as a milk tester in lieu of military service during the war years. After he finished college, Dieffenbach became a county extension agent in Susquehanna County. "But I

Ed and Jane Dieffenbach renew old acquaintances. Ed, formerly from Iowa, worked in Lancaster County as a DHIA milk tester, and later was a Susquehanna County agent before retirement.

Fun They Used To Have never forgot the good times that I had here — bowling, roller skatin, and one-act plays," he said.

One of those one-act plays was reinacted for the banquet entertainment on Saturday night. The original cast presented "The Campbells Are Coming," which they first performed in 1947 at the West Lampeter High School.

Although a bit older, the cast showed that they retained their acting ability as they portrayed the Brannigan hillbilly family entertaining high-brow society members, whose son wants to marry the Brannigan's daughter in hopes of inheritating land from a large farm.

The audience roared with laughter at the shenanigans of cast members Ann Burkholder Diller, Peg Galbreath Murr, Betty Burkholder Reeves, Edie Denlinger Huber, Henry Reist, and Carl Diller.

Other entertainment included aerial slides of Lancaster County farms by Dick Armstrong and Fred Dawn of Lancaster Alliance for New Directions.

Carl Diller and Peg Galbreath Murr re-inact the play they first presented in 1947 while they were members of Rural Youth.

A table of memorabilia from the organization's era included photographs and copies of "Newzette," the club's newletter that was mailed to members to announce meeting dates and activities.

The couple that came the farthest to attend the meeting was Weldon and Betty (Burkholder) Reeves who live in Leesburg, Va.

Since Betty hadn't been to previous reunions, she, like several other members, had some difficulty in recognizing fellow members who had changed over the years.

"I enjoy seeing some old friends. It brings back happy times," she said.

The organization held its first reunion in 1987 and planned to hold a five-year reunion ever since then.

"But our group is dwindling from death and illness, so now we only waited three years since our last reunion," Groff said.

Tioga County 4-H'ers Go To PSU

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Sixteen 4-H'ers from Tioga County traveled to Penn State recently as part of the Education-al/Dairy 4-H Trip sponsored by the Tioga County Milk Auction.

The trip started at Wellsboro and Morris and by 10 a.m. the group was touring the Pennsylvania DHIA Milk Testing Lab. The group discovered how the DHIA lab machines test each milk sample for fat, protein, and somatic cell count, all in a few seconds. The group followed the milk sample from the computer to the final forms that are sent back to the dairy farmer.

Then it was on to the new dairy barns. Lisa Holden, professor of dairy science, met the group at the milking parlor to start the tour. The group toured the new double 10 parlor, freestall and tiestall barns. The 4-H'ers were quizzed on "what did the curtain sidewalls do in the freestyle barn?" The answer: They let more air in for ventilation.

Holden also showed the two different floor patterns on the alleyways to study cow traction, foor wear, and floor wear.

The 4-H'ers also visited two graduate studies in the heifer barns. One of the studies examined feed bunk space requirements for dairy heifers.

The study group was split into three age groups of six, 12, and 18 months, and three different bunk space requirements per heifer (9 inch, 18 inch and 24 inch). The study will show what is the ideal bunk space per heifer required. The 4-H members could really see how the study worked, since each pen had nine heifers and each bank area varied in length.

The group went on to the Dairy Expo, a dairy show for the Penn State Dairy Club college students. Lunch was provided by the Penn State and Block and Bridle Club.

Ornamentals Can Grow In Difficult Areas

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Whether your land is too wet, too dry, too shady or too steep, there are beautiful, hardy plants that will thrive in these conditions.

"The trick to a low-maintenance, long-lived landscape is selecting plants best suited to grow in the climate and soil conditions," says Dr. J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Overly wet soils occur in low-lying areas and are produced by springs, a high groundwater table or nearby ponds or streams. "Consider yourself lucky if you have a wet area on your land," says Nuss. "It can support a wide range of exotic plants, many of which grow nowhere else."

Annuals that do well in shady, poorly drained areas include impatiens, sweet alyssum, scarlet sage, blue sage and verbena. Many ferns also grow in moist, shady soil. A long list of native wildflowers thrive in these conditions, including cardinal lobelia, forget-me-not, wild iris and many species of violets.

Garden centers and catalogs carry native fern and wildflower stock. "Be patient when introducing wildflowers to an area," says Nuss. "It may take a few years for them to get established and become showy."

Shrubs and trees that do well in damp, shady places include alder, dogwood, pussy willow, weeping willow, magnolia and mountain laurel, Pennsylvania's state flower. Some fruit-producing shrubs, such as blueberries, also grow in partial shade if they receive half a day of sun to help flowers and fruit develop.

"Many of these plants do just as well in shady, well-drained areas," says Nuss. Other flowers that thrive in shady, but drier, soils are columbine, lily of the valley, bleeding heart, balloon flower and daylily.

Shrubs and trees that grow in well-drained shady spots include boxwood, false cypress, holly, hemlock, pine and yew. Shrubs such as barberry and cotoneaster produce colorful berries that remain during the winter and provide food for birds.

"Sunny, dry slopes present an entirely different microclimate," says Nuss. "Even during rainy periods, sloped land quickly loses water. These areas require plants that don't mind droughty conditions."

Many animals grow on sunny, dry slopes, including old favorites such as marigold, zinnia, four o'clock, geranium and cosmos. These annuals have remained popular for so long partly because they adapt well to these conditions.

A lot of colorful perennials also grow in semi-arid conditions. These include yarrow, butterflyweed, daylily, lupine and oriental poppy. Well-spaced perennials will spread and cover semi-arid spots and can be propagated by division every few years.

More exotic plants such as ornamental grasses and prickly pear cactus also are at home on dry slopes. In addition, many kinds of ground covers, such as crownvetch and sedum, are ideal for these conditions.

"While these varieties have a high tolerance for sunny, dry areas, few plants do well when completely neglected," says Nuss. "Even drought-tolerant plants appreciate organic mulch and periodic watering during the hot summer months."

Sometimes soil composition also requires careful selection of plants. "Heavy clay soil presents a problem for plants with delicate root systems," says Nuss. "Unless you're willing to spend time adding a lot of organic matter to clay soil, it's best to stick with plants whose roots easily penetrate clay."

These include mint, coltsfoot, Siberian iris and perennial sweet pea. Trees that grow in heavy clay soil include red maple, American hornbeam, pin oak and arborvitae.

"If you want to grow annuals in clay soil, you will need to work in a generous amount of organic material," says Nuss.

To find out your soil's makeup, nutrient content and pH, have samples tested. Soil testing kits can be purchased for $6 at Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices or from 111 Agricultural Analytical Services Laboratory, Tower Road, University Park, PA 16802. Samples may be mailed in the accompanying envelope or delivered to the laboratory, and you will receive the results within two weeks.

Springtime On The Farm

DOVER, Del. — On May 20, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The Delaware Agricultural Museum and Village will be hosting the annual Springtime on the Farm. This living history event re-creates the 1890s and gives visitors a feel for the era. Guides and interpreters are dressed for the time period and take part in activities related to those undertaken on a rural farm in the spring.

Demonstrations of gardening, spinning and weaving, blacksmithing, and sheep shearing (to name a few) will be on hand. Wagon rides and 19th century games are included for the young and young at heart. Music and food round out the day's activities.

Just when you think you've seen and done it all, grab your partner, because at 4 p.m. the Exhibit Hall will be filled with dancing and games as visitors enjoy the old-fashioned barn dance. Cakewalks, square dancing and traditional music will fill the evening.

The Delaware Agricultural Museum and Village, a private, nonprofit organization, is located just south of Delaware State University on Rt. 13 in Dover. Information on this event and others at the Museum is available by calling (302) 734-1618.

Maintenance Prolongs Lawn Mower Life

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Each year, the arrival of spring is heralded by the sound of lawns being mowed. If you want your lawn mower to last from year to year, treat its engine with the same respect you show your car's engine, said a machinery specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"A good lawn mower should last 8 to 10 years," said James Garthe, instructor in agricultural and biological engineering. "Too many people pay $300 for a mower, then get a new one a year or two later because it wasn't maintained properly."

Read the owner's manual and follow the directions for maintenance, Garthe said. Pay strict attention to the viscosity and quality of oil used in the engine.

"The wrong oil shortens your engine's life by causing overheating and excessive wear on valve guides, seals, and main bearings," he said. "Use high quality engine oils containing additives that buffer corrosive acids generated during fuel combustion."

Keeping the air filter clean also extends your mower's life. "The air filter keeps dust, dirt, sand and grass from being drawn into the engine," Garthe said. "If the air filter is dirty, minute particles of silicon eventually can get into the internal moving parts, wearing them down and pitting them."

"A dirty air filter also keeps air from getting to the engine and affects the air-fuel ratio that governs combustion," Garthe said. "The engine has to work harder, wasting energy and fouling the spark plug with deposits."

Check or change the engine's spark plug at either the beginning or the end of each mowing season. "Unscrew the plug and check the gap with a round spark plug gauge," Garthe said. "Carefully scrape deposits from the plug with a pocket knife or wire brush. Take care, however, not to damage the porcelain shank. If the porcelain is broken, the plug won't transfer heat away from the engine as it is designed to. If this happens, replace the plug."

Before storing the mower for winter, change the oil. "Late fall is the best time to change the oil and check the spark plug to make sure that your mower will be ready to go next year," Garthe said. "Don't keep old oil in the engine until spring. Solids, water, and acids that have accumulated in the oil over the summer will corrode your engine.

"Change the oil while it's still warm," he said "Contaminants are suspended in warm oil and will drain out. If you wait until it cools, these materials settle to the bottom of the crankcase and solidify into a thick gum."

If possible, remove gasoline from the tank before storing the mower, either by siphoning or by taking off the tank. Consult your owner's manual to determine the best method for your mower. "Keeping old gasoline in the engine over winter can make it difficult to start next spring." Garthe said.

If you can't remove the gasoline, put a fuel stabilizer designed for small gas engines in the tank and run the mower for a few minutes before storing it. "A good fuel stabilizer can extend the storage life of the gas by up to six months."

If you keep your mower in a damp location, consider coating it with a silicon spray before storing it. "This creates a film that keeps moisture out and discourages rust," Garthe said.

Covering the mower with a plastic tarp also helps keep out moisture and rodents. "Mice have been known to chew wires and other engine parts, and even to build nests in the mower," Garthe said. A plastic tarp will discourage these pests more than cloth, which mice chew up for nesting material.

"These simple steps may keep you from having to buy a new mower next year," Garthe said.

Education Conference Focuses On School-To-Work Transition

UNIVERSITY PARK (Central Co.) — An international conference centering on vocational students' transition from school to the working world will be coordinated by the Center for Professional Personnel Development in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. The conference, which is open to those with an interest in vocational education issues, will be held June 18-21 at Seven Springs Mountain Resort near Somerset.

The Pennsylvania Vocational Education Conference will open Sunday, June 18 with a talk by J.D. Hoye, director of the national School-To-Work Opportunities Office in the U.S. Department of Education. Hoye will discuss governmental programs that help students make the transition into careers as well as the impact the 1994 elections might have on federal programs.

Hoye will also host a question-and-answer session, Monday, June 19. Various workshops will be held through the rest of the conference, focusing on such themes as developing and assessing local School-To-Work programs, making partnerships with businesses, comparisons of different school districts' technical preparation programs across Pennsylvania, preparing diverse student populations for local School-To-Work programs, learning job skills to prepare for the 21st century and incorporating community service into vocational education.

On Tuesday, a panel discussion will center on "School-To-Work Transition Opportunities in the NAFTA Countries."

Panel members include Humberto Dominguez, director of secondary schools in Mexico's Ministry of Education; Tom Norton, president of the Association of Canadian Community Colleges; and Frank Linnehan, a business consultant based in Haddonfield, N.J.

Wednesday's workshops will include a presentation on how to make the most of School-To-Work opportunities at the local level. Riley Harrison, deputy managing director of fleet operations for the City of Philadelphia, will be the featured speaker.

The deadline for conference registration is June 9.

Registration fee for the conference is $40. Room and meal packages start at $113 per person, which includes breakfast and dinner.

For information, contact Carol Conroy, PVEC-95 conference chair, 323 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802. Conroy also can be contacted at (814) 863-3824.

Place in a Sally Lunn ring mold or tubular pan. Let rise again until doubled in bulk. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Yields 16 large servings.

Grazing Gazette

INCLUDING ALFALFA IN THE GRAZING SYSTEM

Dr. Marvin Hall
Dept. of Agronomy
Penn State University

Alfalfa grazing is not new. Alfalfa has been grazed alone or in mixtures with grasses and other legumes since its introduction into the United States. Compared with other management systems, however, grazing alfalfa has never been a widespread practice in this country. While alfalfa has been used extensively as a grazing crop in other countries, grazing of alfalfa in this country traditionally has been relegated to a clean-up operation in the fall.

Grazing systems to optimize alfalfa's grazing potential requires a higher level of management than do some grazing systems. In spite of this, interest in grazing alfalfa has been increasing.

Alfalfa Grazing Management

Rotational grazing is a "must" for optimum returns in an alfalfa or alfalfa-grass grazing system. Rotational grazing is more labor intensive than continuous grazing because of the need to provide and maintain electric fencing and to move animals from one paddock to another on a carefully planned and executed schedule. Care also must be given to avoid damaging the alfalfa stand, because comparatively high numbers of animals graze on a relatively small area of alfalfa. However, the rewards can offset the extra effort.

There is no set rule on number of paddocks required or on paddock size. Most recommendations call for fields to be divided into a minimum of six to eight paddocks for most effective management. Paddock size depends on the number and size of animals being grazed. However, there should be enough animals in a paddock to harvest the available forage in less than four days.

As an example of a rotational grazing practice, a recent demonstration successfully grazed 24 beef cattle on a four-acre alfalfa plot. The field was subdivided into eight half-acre paddocks. After four days grazing on each paddock, the cattle were rotated. After all eight paddocks had been grazed, cattle were returned to the first paddock, which had recovered and was ready for another round of grazing.

Determining the number of animals that each acre of alfalfa will support in a grazing system is a difficult process. The number of animals per acre can be increased as alfalfa becomes more productive beyond the first year of stand life and as the management skills of the farm operator improve. A conservative suggestion is two to three dairy cows or three to five stockers per acre during the early part of the grazing season.

The numer of animals per acre is normally reduced when alfalfa production declines, such as during the typical mid-summer slump period. It is very important to closely monitor grazing to prevent overgrazing. Overgrazing can force animals to consume more supplement, if one is supplied, increasing production costs. Overgrazing also may force animals to eat the basal stems which are not very nutritious, thus limiting animal gain. Severe overgrazing also could damage the crowns of the alfalfa plants.

Undergrazing, on the other hand, can lead to uneven grazing. When unevenly grazed, the remaining plants become larger and less palatable. When the field is grazed again, the animals once more will favor the young tender plants. This in effect reduces the productive acreage unless the older, larger plants are clipped periodically.

One or more "sacrifice" paddocks also enhance a grazing program where alfalfa is the main forage. A sacrifice paddock is an area, preferably with grass sod, that can be used to hold animals during wet weather or to allow adequate growth of the alfalfa paddocks. Hay may be fed in sacrifice paddocks to keep pasture growing at an optimum rate.

Reducing the Risks of Bloat

Bloat can be a problem when animals are grazed on young lush alfalfa. Bloat can be prevented through management practices, feeding poloxalene, or a combination of both. New grazing-type alfalfa varieties are just as likely to cause bloat as traditional hay-type varieties. Some of the management tips include:

- Fill animals with another roughage before turning them onto alfalfa the first time. Don't allow animals to get hungry. Hungry animals may over-eat and bloat when they get fresh pasture.
- Gradually (over a five- or six-day period) increase the time that animals have access to alfalfa pasture.
- Observe animals at least twice a day when they are turned onto alfalfa pasture. Some animals are chronic bloaters and should be watched especially close or removed from the pasture.
- Once they are used to alfalfa pasture, leave the animals on the pasture constantly, even at night.
- Extra caution should be taken during wet, cloudy periods in the early spring when alfalfa is making its most rapid growth. Do not put animals onto alfalfa pasture if a heavy dew is present.
- More mature alfalfa is less likely to cause bloat. Minimize potential problems by initially turning them onto alfalfa that has reached the bloom stage.
- Begin feeding poloxalene two to five days before turning animals onto alfalfa pasture. Use higher dosages when animals are first placed on alfalfa pasture, and reduce the rate if no problems occur. Animals on lush alfalfa will require more poloxalene than on more mature alfalfa.

Efforts Under Way To Enhance Animal Care

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Speaking before the 79th annual meeting of the Livestock Conservation Institute in Kansas City, Mo., in early May, Penn State Professor of Animal Science Lowell L. Wilson outlined three major efforts over the past two years by the dairy and veal industries to enhance animal care on the nation's farms.

The major thrusts of these efforts, which have resulted in formalized guidelines for the care and handling of dairy cattle (including calves) on the nation's dairy, veal and dairy-beef farms, include (1) providing checklists for farmers to evaluate and improve their cattle care, handling, and management programs and facilities; (2) decreasing the possibility of voids in health care and management which could result in lower performance, production, animal well-being, or profitability or greater frequency of morality, morbidity, injuries or violative chemical residues; and (3) increasing public knowledge of the specific science-based recommendations for animal care on dairy and veal farms.

Listed below are three publications that have been either created or updated as a result of this work.

"Guide for the Care and Production of Veal Calves": The profitability of special-fed veal and dairy-beef production depends to a large extent on the health, quality, and potential growth performance of the calves entering the veal or dairy-beef feeding program. This booklet—revised in 1981, 1987, 1990, and 1994—is designated for use by special-fed veal producers, although many of the practices also are useful for dairy-beef calf starters. It is distributed by the American Veal Association upon request and was provided to all of its members. Primary funding for this effort was provided by the National Beef Promotion and Research Board through the Veal Total Quality Management Education Program. Sections include discussions on:

- Facilities (buildings, waste handling, storage, disposal and recycling; ventilation and humidity; individual stalls; group pens; emergency and safety precautions);
- Feed storage area and feeding, watering, and cleaning systems;
- Facility preparation and maintenance and other biosecurity measures;
- Calf care at the dairy farm and obtaining calves;
- Care of veal calves upon arrival at the barn;
- Examination, protection and disposal of the calves;
- Health programs;
- Premarket testing for chemical residues;
- Handling and transportation of veal calves;
- Definition and application of a valid veterinarian-client patient relationship;
- Food and Drug Administration Compliance Policy Guides pertaining to veal production;
- Recommended sources of additional information.

"Calf Care Protocol for Dairy Producers": The veal industry sought to increase communication with the dairy industry to bring about an enhancement of calf health and quality. Communication between veal producers and dairy producers brought about cooperative efforts resulting in a veal/dairy calf task force with representatives from the veal and dairy industries, livestock markets, veterinary associations, and several universities. After almost two years of meeting as a task force, the calf care protocol was developed and adopted as guidelines for calf health and quality. Some of the key summary points set forth in "Caring For Dairy Animals" for the delivery and management of calves at the dairy farm are:

- Comprehensive dairy herd health program;
- Provide dry, sanitary maternity pens or paddocks;
- Dip navels in 7 percent tincture of iodine as soon as possible after birth;
- Provision of high-quality colostrum within the first two hours after birth and at least three times within the first 18 hours;
- If anitbiotics must be used on calves to be marketed, use antibiotics with shorter withdrawal periods (consult a veterinarian);
- Market calves only if they are able to walk unassisted and have a dry navel;
- Market calves between four and eight days of age;
- Transport calves safely and comfortably and handle calves properly whenever moved on the farm or in the market to prevent injuries;
- Follow transportation guidelines, including space requirements.

"Carrying For Dairy Animals": This is a comprehensive 10-point guide presented to the dairy farmer as a reference and as an on-farm evaluation guide, to be completed by the dairy farmer in a self-assessment program in collaboration with a veterinarian or a professional animal scientist. It should be used as a year-to-year continuing guide to determine changes/improvements in management of the different types of dairy cattle on the farm and the facilities that house them. Sections include:

- Producer and employee attitudes;
- Health care;
- Environment for dairy animals;
- Facilities provided for dairy animals;
- Dairy nutritional care: watering and feeding;
- Milking procedures and equipment;
- Transporting and handling dairy animals;
- Delivery and management of calves;
- Specialized care of sick, hospitalized, non-ambulatory, and dead animals;
- Annual review.

The development and application of animal care guidelines for any species for farm and laboratory use should not be taken to mean that most of these practices are not already in use by the majority of farmers. The formalization of the guidelines simply provides a convenient and thorough checklist for animal caretakers and forms a basis of communication for continued improvement in animal well-being.

The publications outlined above can be obtained from the following:

- "References Guide for the Care and Production of Veal Calves" 1994. (Lowell L. Wilson, Revision Editor). Available from the American Veal Association, 1804 Naper Blvd., Suite 401, Naperville, IL 60563.
- "Calf Care Protocol for the Dairy Producer" 1994. (Anne Banville and Lowell Wilson, Editors). Developed by the Joint Veal/Dairy Taskforce on Calf Quality. Available from the American Veal Association, 1804 Naper Blvd., Suite 401, Naperville, IL 60563.
- "Caring for Dairy Animals (Reference Guide and On-Farm Evaluation Guide)" 1994. (Kenneth E. Olson, Editor). Available from Agri-Education, Inc., 801 Shakespeare Ave., Stratford, IA 50149.

Fairs Brochure Available

GRATZ (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs (PSACF) announces that a listing of all the agricultural fairs within the state is available in a colorful brochure. Each fair is listed by county, the fair name, the location, a contact phone number, and the date for the 1995 event. For easier reference, the state is divided into four regions.

County fairs, the showplace of Pennsylvania Agriculture, attracts millions during their April through October season. Nearly every county in Pennsylvania has at least one agricultural fair and many have more than one. A total of 113 events are held yearly.

Court Renounces Renewable Oxygenate Rule

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) voiced its disappointment after learning that the Renewable Oxygenate Requirement (ROR) has been struck down by the United States Court of Appeals.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) promulgated the ROR as a means to help ensure a role for cleaner burning renewable fuels in the Reformulated Gasoline (RFG) program which began on January 1, 1995. Shortly after the ROR was finalized by the EPA, the American Petroleum Institute, National Petroleum Refiners Association, and the American Methanol Institute filed suit to obtain a stay, which would prevent the implementation of the ROR along with the RFG program. The suit further requested that the court rule on the statutory authority of the EPA to draft such a regulation.

"While the Court's decision is very disappointing, it has already begun to galvanize corn growers nationwide. This announcement will sharpen our focus and force us to redouble our efforts to provide a meaningful role for renewable fuels, like ethanol in reformulated gasoline," said Rod Gangwish, president of NCGA and a farmer from Shelton, Neb. "We took President Clinton at his word that renewable energy fuels were important to America's energy and economic future and that his administration would ensure a role for them. This announcement by the Court of Appeals sends just the opposite signal. We call on the President to urgently address this matter.

"The NCGA believes that with oil imports now exceeding 50 percent of our nation's energy requirements, there is no better time to begin the process of gradually replacing fossil fuels. The NCGA will not back away from this issue. Imported fossil fuels are a prehistoric approach to our energy needs, and renewable fuels, life ethanol, are the wave of the future," said Gangwish.

A study just released by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) shows that ethanol production from corn has a conservative net energy gain of 24 percent. This compared to gasoline at a 25 percent net energy loss and Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether (MTBE) at nearly a 40 percent net energy loss. Mike Bryan, NCGA ethanol manager said, "The issue of net energy savings of ethanol from the field to the finished gallon can no longer be disputed. The evidence continues to mount, showing that for every gallon of ethanol produced, we lessen our dependence on foreign oil and reduce our trade deficit. In addition, we create new domestic jobs and stimulate economic growth."

Bryan said, "If ethanol blends would have been allowed to compete with other oxygenates like MTBE, for ozone reduction, as they should have been, there would be no need for the ROR in the first place. Unfortunately, ethanol's exclusion from the RFG market was based on restrictive mass emission science.

"There are several absolutes regarding ethanol. First, ethanol is renewable. Second, ethanol is environmentally beneficial. And third, ethanol is consumer friendly. In fact, when gasoline pumps are labeled with the oxygenate contained in the fuel, thereby providing consumers the opportunity to make an informed choice, ethanol blends are the hands-down winner," Gangwish said.

Waiting for the courts decision apparently has not had a negative impact on new ethanol plant development. There are now 43 ethanol plants, up from 38 just 2 years ago, producing over 1.4 billion gallons annually using about 560 million bushels of corn. There are six new plants under construction with a total capacity of 185 million gallons per year.

Mudder Tractor From Massey Ferguson

ATLANTA, Ga.—Massey Ferguson's new MF 399 Mudder tractor is specially designed to provide high crop clearance and creep ground speeds. It is available in either a cab or footstep four-wheel-drive model.

"The MF®399 Mudder tractor is well adapted to vegetable or bedded farming typically found in the western states, as well as rice field farming in the delta area of Louisiana and Arkansas," said Wilfred Boyle, director, Massey Ferguson operations. "With 95 PTO horsepower, this tractor is the ideal size to handle cultivating, planting, transplanting, and harvesting applications."

The MF 399 Mudder utilizes a standard 12x12 Synchronized Shuttle transmission with an optional creeper gear that adds four extra-slow forward speeds. The transmission with creeper gear provides ground speeds as low as .21 mph at standard PTO rpm, and a transport speed of just over 19 mph at rated engine rpm. This wide range of speeds provides excellent speed matching from harvesting and "pick and pack" operations to high transport speeds.

New Massey Ferguson MF 399 Mudder Tractor is specially designed to provide high crop clearance and creep ground speeds.

Ground clearance is 24.6 inches under the front axle and 20.1 inches under the drawbar. With these high clearances, the tractor can be operated over tall or bedded crops without damaging the plants and improving crop quality and profitability.

Select Sires Hires Detwiler

PLAIN CITY, Ohio—Paul Detwiler has been named to the newly created position of director of marketing and advertising at Select Embryos, Inc. in Plain City, Ohio.

In his new role, Detwiler's primary responsibility is market development for domestic and international embryo sales on behalf of the owner's who house their embryo donors at Select Embryos. In addition, Detwiler will be instrumental in the marketing of direct thaw and transfer embryos.

He also will develop advertising plans, conduct tours for domestic and international visitors, and promote Select Embryo's products and services.

"Direct Thaw and Transfer is a new technology which is the future of on-farm embryo transfer," Detwiler said in a company news release. "We believe there is great market potential for embryos that are delivered to farmers through America's best sales force for transfer into their recipients at the farmer's convenience. Direct Thaw and Transfer embryos will play a major role in the future of Select Embryos," he said.

Formerly, Detwiler served as a regional sales manager and sire program consultant with NOBA. An Ohio native, he and his wife Shelly reside in Marysville, Ohio with their two young sons, Jake and Luke.

Farmers Union Supports Reformulated Gas Program

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The National Farmers Union (NFU) has become the first farm association to join with the American Corn Growers Assocation (ACGA), in supporting and endorsing the reformulated gasoline (RFG) program. This action was approved at the recently held NFU convention in Milwaukee.

According to NFU President Leland Swenson, "The national delegates of Farmers Union saw the many advantages that RFG holds for agriculture and the country. We are proud to join with the ACGA in leading the way for agriculture's total endorsement of the program."

In making it part of its energy and family farm section, the language reads:

a. Agriculture is one of the biggest winners with the implementation of the RFG program.

b. RFG is the major avenue for increasing the demand for oxygenates, especially ethanol and ETBE.

c. RFG is the impetus to spur on the development and commercialization of ETBE. This could result in a new market for almost 200 bushels of new corn demand per year.

d. Increased ethanol demand translates into developing and building more ethanol production facilities. Most of these will be built in rural areas creating new jobs, expanding the local tax base, and providing new markets for the crops we grow.

e. Increased oxygenate demand will decrease foreign imports of oil and increase the demand for domestic production. This could mean lower energy cost for production agriculture.

f. The new demand for ethanol or ETBE in the RFG program will likely result in an increase in the price of corn.

g. The advantages to agriculture under RFG are as clear as the air we breathe. New corn utilization, more ethanol production facilities, development of ETBE and higher commodity prices can all result from the RFG program.

h. These advantages only exist if the RFG program remains in effect in its entirety. Any tampering with the program or the oxygenates that make up the program will result in the loss of everything that agriculture has gained.

Therefore, the National Farmers Union supports the RFG program, both in Milwaukee and the United States. In order to build public confidence in the RFG, the National Farmers Union urges health effects testing on all oxygenates by the EPA.

"The ACGA is pleased to have the nation's largest progressive farm association join with us in support of the RFG program. We will take this positive message to all of agriculture and our elected officials to enlist their approval of this beneficial program," stated Gary Goldberg, president of the ACGA.

Bouton Earns AFGC Award

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Dr. Joe Bouton, best known for inventing Alfagraze, has received an award for his significant contributions and service to forage-based agriculture.

Bouton was presented the AFGC Merit Award during the annual American Forage and Grassland Council awards banquet held here in mid-March. The award is presented annually to individuals who have made "superior contributions in some phase of forage and grassland agriculture and who have earned recognition among their colleagues for work and productivity through research, teaching, extension, production, or industrial development."

Currently professor of crop and soil services at the University of Georgia, Bouton has worked extensively in furthering the development and use of "grazing" alfalfas. A few years ago, this dedicated research resulted in the release of Alfagraze—the first alfalfa variety bred for both haying and grazing.

Bouton also devotes time to breeding fescue for adaptation outside "normal" fescue use areas. This recently resulted in the release of Georgia 5, a tall fescue adapted for use by livestock producers in the coastal plain region of the southeastern U.S.

Bouton's interest in agriculture began during his childhood on a cotton, wheat and soybean farm in Mississippi. He continued his training in agriculture at Mississippi State University where he received his bachelor's degree in agronomy in 1972, and then headed to the University of Florida where he earned a master's degree in horticulture in 1974 and his doctorate in agronomy in 1977.

Bouton is involved in teaching and research and serves as chairman of the National Alfalfa Crop Advisory Committee. He has been designated a Fellow for both the American Society of Agronomy and the Crop Sciences Society of America. Earlier this year, he was chosen "Man of the Year" by Progressive Farmer magazine

ASA Director Testifies For Biodiesel

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The American Soybean Association proposed changes in regulations for the Alternate Fuel Transportation Program that would enable biodiesel to reach its full potential as a renewable fuel.

ASA's testimony before the Department of Energy's Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy was presented by Mike Yost, a farmer from Murdock, Minn., and a member of the ASA board of directors. Favorable clarification and revision of the Alternative Fuel Program regulations to include biodiesel and biodiesel-powered alternative fueled vehicles (AFVs) is a priority for America's soybean farmers.

Yost told the panel that ASA strongly supports the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (EPACT) and firmly believes that biodiesel should play an important role in the implementation of that legislation. Increased use of biodiesel as a result of implementation of EPACT can improve our environment and enhance our national energy security. Biodiesel powered AFVs offer cost effective means of compliance with the provisions of EPACT. For rural states, such as Minnesota, biodiesel offers additional opportunities for rural economic development through the sale of agricultural commodities and the construction of biodiesel production facilities.

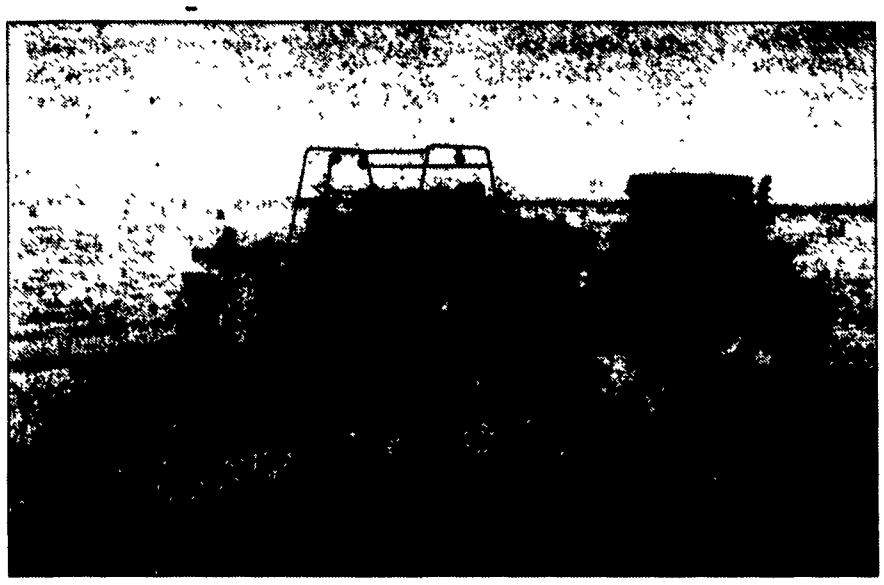
Biodiesel is the generic term for cleaner burning, ester-based, fuels for compression ignition (diesel) engines that are derived from renewable organic oils. The primary feedstocks for biodiesel in the U.S. are vegetable oils. While the biodiesel industry is relatively new in the U.S., biodiesel has been used in Europe on a commercial basis for several years. Soybeans are the basis for a $12 billion industry in the U.S. which includes substantial domestic as well as foreign sales of soybeans and soybean products.

Yost presented the following summary of specific recommendations: First, USDOE must confirm that pure biodiesel is designated as an alternative fuel. Then, as part of a separate rulemaking, USDOE should further designate a 20 percent blend of biodiesel with diesel fuel, known as B20, as separate and distinct alternative fuel. Second, USDOE must interpret its regulations to facilitate the conversion of new and existing diesel vehicles to biodiesel AFVs to meet the acquisition requirements of the regulations in such a way that states will have the maximum flexibility to utilize competitively priced biodiesel fuel blends, such as B20. Third, USDOE should allow states and alternative fuel providers to include the acquisition or conversion of medium duty and heavy duty AFVs in their fleets to count toward the optional excess vehicle acquisition credit program.

Yost gave assurance that this kind of flexibility will not, in any way, contradict the goals of EPACT. Instead, these minor changes to the proposed regulations will give greater flexibility to states and alternative fuel providers while at the same time increasing farm income through the use of domestically produced renewable agricultural products. These changes make sense because they are beneficial to the farmers who produce the feedstocks for biodiesel, beneficial to the states and alternative fuel suppliers who will be major consumers of biodiesel, and beneficial to the nation as a whole, which will have a cleaner environment and greater energy security as a result of the increased use of biodiesel. All in all, biodiesel can and should play a major part in meeting the goals of EPACT.

Best Values in New Equipment

We hear you.



Like most aspects of farming, baling has changed dramatically over the last 20 years. Once it involved rounding up a bunch of kids to load wagons; slowly, it has evolved into the era of one man and big round bales. And now, in response to your requests, this evolution continues.

With continued improvements, the Case International 8570 mid-sized rectangular baler and its big brother, the 8580 large rectangular baler, make baling more convenient than ever. Both are proof that we do indeed hear you.

These machines produce a bale size and weight up to 1,000 lbs. for the 8570 and 2,200 lbs. for the 8580 that's easy to stack, store, transport and feed.

Formed with easy-separating flakes, these bales can be fed by hand, processed, or pulled apart by livestock. They're tight and dense for handling and shipping ease. And thanks to the design of the 8500 Series balers, they're packed with nutrition.

A wide, low-profile pickup reduces the loss of valuable leaves, while the pre-packer chamber keeps nutrients contained within the bale. And each pre-formed flake is exceptionally uniform in size and weight.

The Case International 8570 and 8580 rectangular balers. You asked for an evolution in baling, and we heard you. Find out more from your Case IH dealer today.

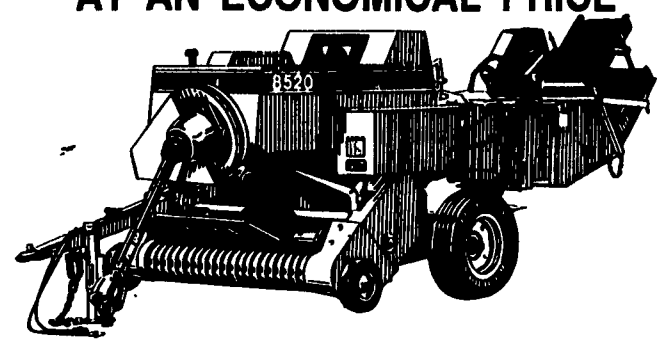
OUTSTANDING BALER PERFORMANCE MEANS GREATER NUTRITION AT AN ECONOMICAL PRICE



Case International 8520/8530 Rectangular Balers

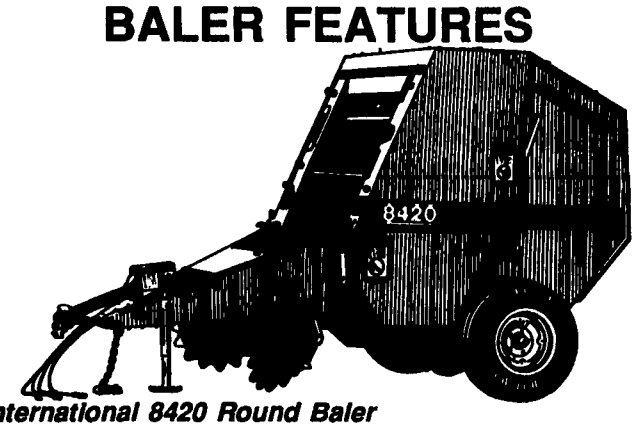
These two balers both feature the Case IH center line design. Eliminates turning corners with the crop to get it into the bale chamber, as is common with conventional designs. This saves valuable protein-rich leaves. Also saves time because you don't have to change from field to road position for transport.

Other outstanding features are:

- Low-profile baler design provides excellent visibility to the rear of the baler.
- Low-profile pickup... reduces crop lifting height, saving nutritious leaves.
- Hay goes straight into the unique prepacker chamber... regardless of windrow size.. for uniform flake and bale density.

Come in soon for the rest of the story!

THE COMPACT BALER WITH BIG-BALER FEATURES



Case International 8420 Round Baler

Produce consistent 39x54-inch bales using only a 30-PTO horsepower tractor. Yet reap the advantage of direct feed, open-throat chamber design so bales build fast, sure and tight. Other big-baler features:

- Aggressive starter roll so each bale starts right.
- Audible signal when bales are done and ready for wrapping
- Cam-actuated low-profile pickup, close tine spacing for clean sweeping of heavy windrows.
- Optional hydraulic twine wrapping system

A heavyweight producer in a lightweight package.

DISORDERS OF THE SKIN AND FEATHERS OF DOMESTIC POULTRY

Patty Dunn, DVM
Animal Diagnostic Lab

Abnormalities of the skin and feathers can be important, easily observed, outward signs of disease or management problems in chickens and turkeys.

In general, healthy birds tend to "preen" or groom themselves, often resulting in smooth, clean, glistening feathers. Unhealthy, depressed birds often present an unkempt, ruffled appearance.

Birds with upper respiratory infections may have dirty, darkened feathers around the eyes as well as on the outside feathers of the wings near the shoulders. Affected birds have eye and nasal discharges that accumulate around the eyes and beaks which they rub onto their wings. Dust and litter tend to stick to these areas of mucoid secretions, causing dark, dirty areas on white feathers. Birds with diarrhea may have fecal soiling around the vent area, and birds on wet litter often have manure caked on their toes and foot pads.

Abnormal skin coloration can also be associated with suboptimal health. Pale skin or blue/gray coloration (cyanosis) of the head and extremities is a sign of blood loss, anemia, or poor oxygenation of the blood. Broilers in advanced heat failure from ascites syndrome often show this symptom.

In some markets, broilers are fed extra carotenoid pigment-containing feed ingredients in order to impart a deep yellow color to the skin. Pale shanks or other pale skin in these birds may indicate coccidiosis or other intestinal problems resulting in malassimilation of the pigments and other nutrients.

Nutritional deficiencies are well documented causes of skin/feather abnormalities. Thickened, cracked skin and crusty lesion around the head and feet are seen with deficiencies of pantothenic acid, biotin, or zinc. Profound vitamin E deficiency can result in bloody fluid accumulations in the subcutaneous tissue. Various amino acid deficiencies can result in developmental problems in feathering, particularly in young, growing birds. These nutritional deficiencies should not occur in poultry that are correct for the specific species, production type, and age of bird.

Contact irritation, generally from continuous contact with wet litter, manure, or rough litter or other abrasive surfaces, can cause ulcerated foot pads, breast buttons, and breast blisters, especially in heavy strains of birds. High bird density and poor litter conditions predispose to "scabby hip syndrome," in which crusted scars are present on the outer thigh, flank and back skin of broilers.

Skin trauma — scratches, wounds, etc. — from toenail damage or excessive picking and fighting can be common in certain management situations. Large, aggressive male breeders may cause excessive loss of back feathers and skin scratches in hens. The breaks in the skin can lead to generalized bacterial infections and death in some instances. Proper beak trimming and toe trimming, appropriate lighting, and good male breeder management can help alleviate these problems.

Squamous cell carcinoma, a skin "cancer" of unknown origin, causes small ulcerated areas of skin with raised borders. These lesions are generally not seen on live birds because of feather coverage and they do not cause ill-health in the affected bird. When two or more of these lesions are seen on a broiler carcass after picking, the carcass is condemned for aesthetic reasons.

Known infectious causes of integument disorders in poultry include several viruses, bacteria, molds and parasites as follows:

Viruses

• Pox virus infections cause nodules and crusty, raised lesions on the skin of the head and facial appendages (wattle, comb). Lesions may also be found on the feet, vent or other parts of the body including the inside of the mouth.

• Marek's Disease virus can cause enlargement of feather follicles and various degrees of reddened, raised tumors on the skin. Extensive raised, reddened areas on the shanks of the legs of broilers is called "Alabama red leg." A gangrenous dermatitis-like condition has been associated with chick anemia agent, also referred to as chicken infectious anemia virus.

• Reticuloendotheliosis virus can cause feathering abnormalities in association with a "runting syndrome."

• Highly pathogenic avian influenza virus can cause striking edema of the face with vesicle or blister formation and dark, necrotic areas on the combs and wattles.

• Virulent strains of Newcastle Disease can cause puffiness around the eyes and neck due to subcutaneous edema fluid accumulation.

• Various enteric viruses such as reovirus can indirectly cause feather problems due to interference with normal digestion and absorption of nutrients necessary for proper feather development. The result is rough, bent feathers with stress lines and abnormal feather orientation in which feathers stick out at odd angles ("helicopter feathers").

Bacteria

• Gangrenous dermatitis is a skin condition caused by a mixed bacterial infection of staphylococcus aureus with clostridium perfringens or clostridium septicum. It can cause high mortality in commercial chickens and is highly associated with previous immunosuppression. The skin becomes necrotic, feathers pull out easily, and bloody fluid is present under the skin. This "weeping" skin lesion on the wings is commonly called "blue wing."

• Erysipelas classically causes a swollen, dark red to purple snood on tom turkeys, or a generalized red and congested appearance to the skin. Other acute bacterial septicemias may also cause the skin to appear flushed.

• Wattles may be greatly swollen on chickens with chronic fowl cholera due to Pasteurella Multocida infection.

• Infectious Process or "IP" is a common cause of condemnations in broilers. The subcutaneous tissues of the abdomen and legs contain yellow exudate, and e. coli bacteria are usually isolated from the lesions. It is likely that other factors are involved in the development of IP.

Molds

A fungal skin infection known as favus or ringworm is rarely seen in the modern poultry industry, but occasionally occurs in small specialty flocks.

• The yeast Candida Albicans sometimes causes "vent gleet" in laying hens, characterized by white encrustations on the skin and feathers of the vent area.

Parasites

External parasites such as mites and lice cause skin irritations to the birds they infest. In heavy numbers, they can also cause profound blood loss and anemia.

• The northern fowl mite is the most economically important pest in this group, as it is a common parasite in caged-layer complexes.

• The scaly leg mite is uncommon today, but still exists in some small flocks of chickens. This mite burrows under the skin scales of the lower legs and feet, causing raised scales and scabs that may progress to actual deformation of the lower limb. Chiggers, bed bugs and ticks are rarely problems in commercial confined flocks in the mid-Atlantic region.

The causes of skin or feather disorders are many and varied. In some instances, changes in the integument may not impact significantly on the productivity of the flock as a whole. However, outward skin symptoms may be important clues to specific disease entities affecting the productivity of the flock as a whole.

Investigation into these problems can point to management and disease control deficiencies that can be improved upon in the future to maximize health and profitability in your poultry operation.

Students Practice Sheep Shearing Skills

CAMPBELLTOWN (Lebanon Co.)—The 8th session of the Lancaster County Sheep and Wool Growers' Association's Shearing School was held April 7-8. Bucks County Extension Agent Mike Fournier was the sheep shearing instructor and Lancaster County Extension agent Chester Hughes was the workshop coordinator.

The class met at a farm in Campbelltown. Rod Nissley, sheep producer, volunteered his sheep flock for the shearing students to practice their new skills.

Twelve enthusiastic students ranging in age from late teens to early sixties completed the two-day workshop, shearing 68 head of white-face ewes. Since the sheep shearing school began, 141 shepherds have been trained in the art of sheep shearing in this Penn State Cooperative Extension program.

Since taking the shearing course, there have been five individuals who have collectively more than 7,500 sheep (2,500 in 1994). One of these individuals reported an income of over $9,000.

The sheep shearing school started in 1987 to address the need for more skilled shearers in southeast Pennsylvania to accommodate the numerous small sheep flocks scattered throughout this region.

John E. Zerphey, Halifax, shears sheep at the two-day shearing workshop.

The workshop provides a list of available sheep shearers for small flock owners to complete this springtime chore. More information about this list of sheep shearers is available at (717) 394-6851.

The second day of the workshop, all attendees reported stiff and sore muscles. There was a greater appreciation for the professional sheep shearers, who can shear 50-60 sheep in one day.

Students Gain Professional Experience

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Delaware Valley College (DVC) students competed against twenty-nine other college teams from throughout the United States in the student marketing competition of the National Agri-Marketing Association (NAMA) Conference held in St. Louis, Mo.

Industry professionals, including representatives from Rumrill-Hoyt Advertising, FMC Corporation, and the Beef Industry Council, judged the event. The students placed third in their heat, missing the next round by a very narrow margin.

It had been six years since a team from Delaware Valley College competed in the prestigious event. When asked about making a presentation of this magnitude, senior Ken Harman said, "It (the competition) has involved many hours of work, but I've learned as much from working on this presentation as I have in many of my classes because it was so practical."

Students also gathered ideas for future presentations by watching other schools and by observing The Best of NAMA, an awards ceremony featuring advertisements and commercials developed by member industries.

NAMA provides students with the opportunity to interact with agricultural suppliers as well as marketing and communications professionals. Senior Amy Welker said, "I feel that the NAMA Conference and student marketing team competition were very valuable experiences. By interacting with other student chapters, industry representatives, and professionals, and by attending development meetings, I learned new ideas which will help me make valuable career connections."

Dr. John Avery, who advised the college's NAMA Chapter commented on his team's success, noting they were among the top 10 in outstanding chapter competition and received compliments on their marketing team's performance.

1995-96 chapter president Leslie Cline looks forward to participating in next year's competition, scheduled for San Diego, Calif. in April. She said, "Students presented plans with as much competence as any professional. Those of us who competed, as well as those of us who watched the competition, came back from the conference highly motivated to accomplish even more next year."

Participating in the NAMA Conference were seniors Steve Dietrich of Germansville; Ken Harman of New Castle; Ricardo Siemsen of Doylestown; Travis Werley of Shoemakersville; Amy Welker of Gettysburg and Diane Yoder of McVeytown. Also participating were junior Julie Dolin of Herndon, Va.; sophomores Leslie Cline of Ashaway, R.I. and Lonce Scott of Philadelphia; and freshman Bill Kitsch of Dorothy, N.J.

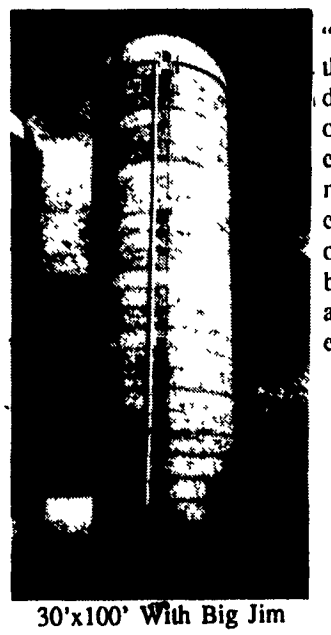
"THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING FEED STORAGE"



30'x100' With Big Jim Drive Thru

"The Big Jim is doing a fine job bringing the feed down. We really believe the drive-thru, Big Jim System is worth anyone's consideration. It is costing more every year to grow forages and we feel our minimal quality and quantity losses are easily paying for the additional initial cost of this investment compared to that of a bunker. We are throwing no feed away and the cows are milking the best they ever have." (over 90 lbs. per cow.)
Signed/Atwater Farms
Rick Atwater

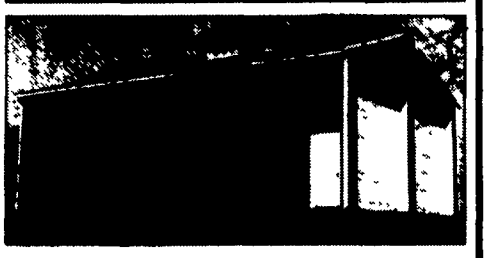
Side with Alumax ALU-TUFF Steel



When you put up a building, you expect it to be attractive and to last. A building constructed with ALU-TUFF will meet those expectations. That's because ALU-TUFF is made using top-quality materials, super-tough protective coatings, and a unique rib design that's both functional and attractive.

Years from now when other buildings are starting to show their age, your building will still look good.

- A STRONG PROFILE High 3/4-inch ribs on nine-inch centers give ALU-TUFF exceptionally high spanning properties for its weight and thickness, while stiffening ribs in flat areas prevent rippling.
- MADE TO LAST To keep Alu-Tuff working hard and looking good for years to come, we protect it with an oven-cured system of four different coatings.
- A GREAT LOOKING PANEL You don't have to sacrifice good looks to get a tough steel panel.
- MORE QUALITY FEATURES Each ALU-TUFF sheet is 38 inches wide to provide 36-inch coverage. That's wide enough to minimize the number of side laps, yet narrow enough to be easy to handle.

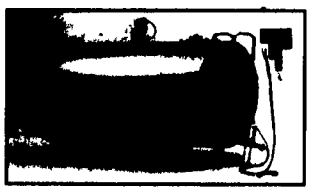
DAIRY FARM EQUIPMENT

Scroll-Compressor Technology

New in 1994



You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller® milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$41 000	$28 000
Cost of electricity @ .08 kW for 12 000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17 550	$22 850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48 550	$50 850
Savings	$ 2 300

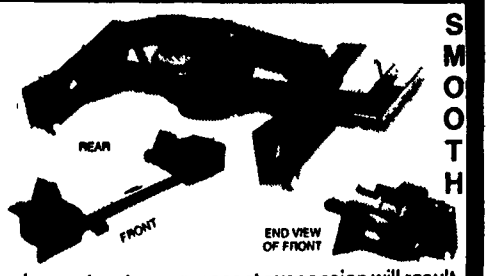
KELDERMAN AIR RIDE

SMOOTH



SMOOTH

Adding a Kelderman Air Ride Conversion system to your present suspension will result in a two stage suspension system. This is not to be confused with adding an Air bag mounted above the axle. Allows adding extra spring leafs to increase load rating and still maintain Air-Ride comfort.

The bolt on basic package utilizes an air stem mounted in a convenient location to add or remove air from the system

Optional 12 volt compressor allows changing air pressure setting on the go.

Currently available for front and rear suspension in Dodge Series 250 & 350 trucks. Available soon for Dodge Dakota models.

Also available for some Ford, Chevy and GMC truck models. Special orders available for most motor homes. This option will smooth out the ride on those rough-road fishing/camping trips.

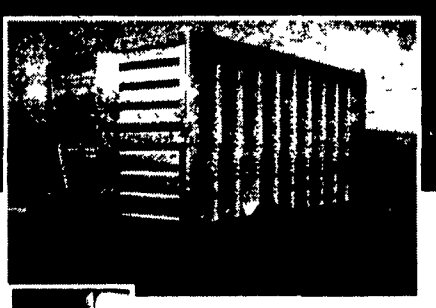
Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Let EBY custom build one for you.

GOODYEAR MONTHLY MAINTENANCE TIP

ROADING OF FARM TIRES

If tires are to operate for any length of time on roads or other hard surfaces and the draft load is not great, it is advisable to increase the pressure in the tire to the maximum recommendation in order to reduce the movement of the tread bars that causes excessive wiping action.

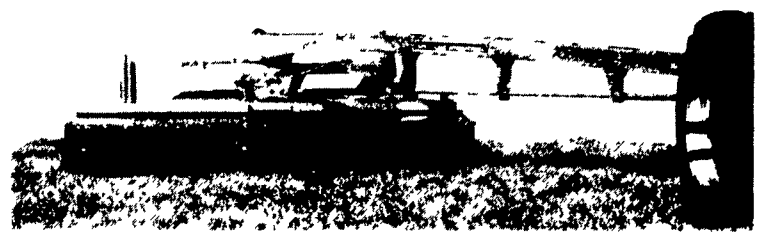
8315 Disc Mower Conditioner

15 Foot Swing Frame, Pull Type



First Of Its Kind

The 8315 is the first mower conditioner of its kind to combine a center-pivot tongue and mechanical drive with 15'3" (4.65m) rotary disc cutting performance. With its wide cutting width, the 8315 is designed to handle large acreage hay production.

A hydraulic center-pivot tongue and swivel gearbox hitch enables the 8315 to cut fields in both directions or turn corners with ease. Its rotary disc header features a heavy-duty spur gear cutterbar and 10 oval cutting discs that are powered by a belt and gearbox drive. High-speed discs are heat treated spring steel for durability and spin at 2,600 rpm to slice through the toughest crop conditions. Header tilt is also hydraulically controlled from the cab.

The wide 110" (2.79m) steel-on-steel intermeshing conditioning rolls feature automatic separation for non-plug operation, and adjustable roll spacing and pressure. A swath baffle and adjustable windrow forming shields are standard.

See Binkley & Hurst Today In Stock For Delivery Now!

FULL-FEATURED PERFORMER

The Case International 8340 mower conditioner offers you features in a 9 foot plus cutting width that you'd only expect to find as options, or on a larger more expensive machine.

Features like a heavy box-beam frame and tongue that you hydraulically position from the tractor. Quickly steer around field obstacles or switch between field and transport positions. Low maintenace describes the 1700-stroke per minute sickle. Sickle sections bolt-on for quick and convenient replacement.

- A five-bat reel feeds the crop uniformly into the conditioning rolls. Rolls automatically separate to reduce the chance of plugging.

And there are even more features that make the Case International 8340 a truly deluxe high performance mower conditioner. Stop in and see them all.

Also 12' swing frame & self propelled machines in stock. Don't wait, save by seeing Binkley & Hurst.

The LR Blade has been setting the standard in medium-duty blades for over 20 years. The LR is ideal for road maintenance, soil leveling, ditching and terracing work, or feedlot cleanup on tractors. Durability and ruggedness are built into every LR with features including a 2" solid steel kingpin and a 5/16" thick moldboard. Versatility is provided by the LR's three basic mechanical adjustments: moldboard tilt, pivot, and mainframe swing which add up to a total of 22 non-wrench adjustments.

REMEMBER THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES...

LAW #1- (17) Years Old is not equal to (≠) WORN OUT...
Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (4,000) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...
(4,000) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (4,000) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...
When Hoober's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.

With the ROLLANT 46 ROTO CUT, the incoming crop is sliced by the 14 serrated knives, spaced 2.75" apart across the width of the intake. The resulting sliced material can be compressed to a higher density and is much easier to feed out to livestock.
CLAAS ROLLANT round balers are a cost effective investment thanks to their output, reliability and ease of maintenance. Their versatility also helps to keep them in action for many months of the year.

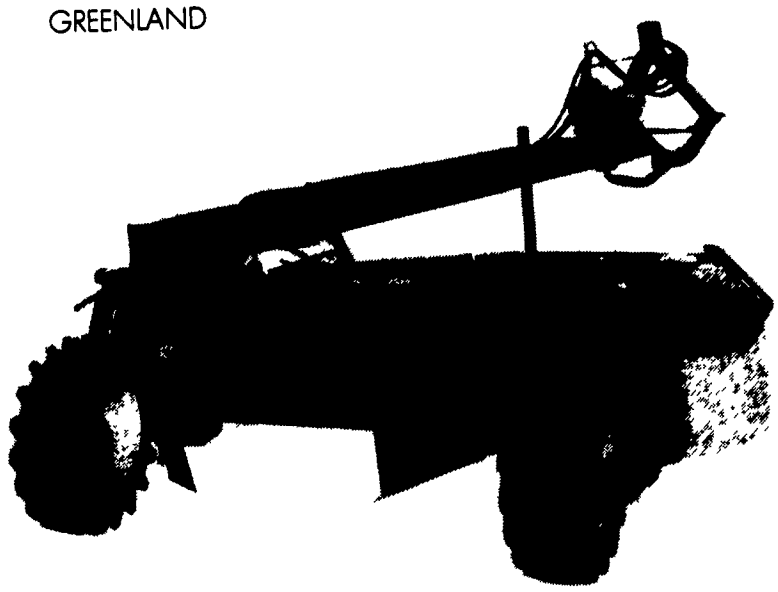
VICON GMR 2400/2800/3200 MOWER-CONDITIONERS



Forage harvesting with a GMR Mower-Conditioner means:
* rapid crop drying as a result of roller conditioning and adjustable swath shape
* preservation of nutritional value
* high harvesting capacity
* greater efficiency of next stage machines (tedder, swath rake, self-loading wagon, baler, etc).

The GMR Mower-Conditioner has a long service life, is simple to operate and easy to maintain.

MF Dynashift™ transmissions get top reviews.

On the one hand, it's a smooth, productive powershift.

Your left hand controls a 4-speed powershift transmission for smooth, clutchless shifts under load and outstanding productivity.

On the other hand, it's an efficient, reliable manual transmission.

Your right hand controls an 8-speed synchronized transmission with synchronized forward/reverse shuttle.

MASSEY FERGUSON

Together you get a tractor with 32 forward and 32 reverse speeds that's more productive than a manual shift and more economical and reliable than a powershift. Test drive a Dynashift transmission today on one of these outstanding MF tractors:

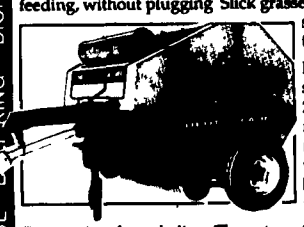
Stop in - See Us On Why DEUTZ FAHR We Have "The Best" Round Baler for Green Wrapped Hay!

Deutz-Fahr GP round balers are tough They're built for productivity in the heaviest forage or residue crop, from haylage to corn stalks

A wide open throat, and full width 58" pick-up with four rows of double tines, spaced at a narrow 2 ¾", pave the way for positive feeding, without plugging Slick grasses flow through with the same straight forward efficiency as the heaviest swaths



Power driven ribbed profile steel rollers - 17 on the GP 2 30, 22 on the GP 2 50 - compress material from the outside in, forming extremely dense, weatherproof bales Smooth bales that keep their shape and preserve quality

Faster tying-faster baling The automatic twin arm tying system reduces binding time to 14 seconds An optional netting attachment wraps the bale with net, twine, or a combination of both All functions are monitored from the comfort of your tractor seat with a control box that uses visual and audible signals

GP 2 30 for easy to handle 4'x4' bales from 500-700 lbs (hay)
GP 2 50 for solid 4'x5' bales, weighing up to 1000 lbs (hay)

Either way, there's a reliable Deutz-Fahr round baler to match your tractor power, and your feeding and storage operation

CLAAS Rollant round balers give you what you want

—one quality round bale after another.

Discover Quality...Discover Value...

The Rollant 66 makes fast work of 4'x5' bales. Its unique two-stage pick-up and close tines produce a clean, efficient harvest in less time. Rollatex netting wraps a bale in 10 seconds or less, and double-twine wraps it up in just 20.

The Rollant 46 introduced CLAAS's innovative fixed bale chamber to the marketplace. This versatile baler handles all farm operations from dry hay to silage. Nobody produces a better 4'x4' bale.

The Rollant 42 was designed for family livestock operations. This economical investment produces weather-tight 4'x4' bales for the highest nutrient content possible.

CLAAS bales mean nutrient-filled edible hay, low spoilage, and high crude protein retention.

Each Rollant offers the innovative chamber, low-profile pick-up, and world class dependability. And they all share CLAAS's international reputation for low maintenance, durability and long-life.

Call now to see how you can improve the round figures on your bottom line.
